God of weather names

I'm dying here friends... Dying. Just received one of the most ardent emails ever on food budgeting and couldn't stop laughing at this guy. He's on a mission and needs our help to get to the bottom of it! :)How do people eat for just $1.00 per meal?? What should a fat man do?? Review this in your spare time and then chime below if you want... I will admit that I am quite curious how people are tinkering with such low food budgets as well – especially in a healthy way. What's the secret, guys? Mr. J. Money, I have been a longtime reader, or at least I feel as it were, because I have navigated many of your current and past articles over the previous 10 months. My name is Braden and I'm a father of two. One thing I am constantly interested in, but have yet to find a logical answer to, even throughout the vast wisdom of the internet, is how in THE NAME of God people seem to spend so sparingly on food consumption when my own family seems, well, can't at all!! I have vigorously categorized and monitored my family's spending habits for the better part of a decade and have a historical record to prove it. I can mark periods of oversupply by month and relate them to certain life events (travel, reshuffle, moving, fat retention, etc.). I am an accountant by trade and every bit as meticulous in the details as an accountant is prone to be. I have not left an unread receipt in 10+ years however. I can't fathom how people can execute monthly food expenses per family unit of less than $1000. Impossible, unbearable, unbearable!!! I'm not going to shy away from the facts. 1..... I'm overweight. I ate. Probably, by most accounts, a LOT. I love food. I like food that is good for you; I like not good for your food. I love expensive food; I like cheap food. There aren't many ways of food that this person doesn't love. Oh, you found new garlic, cajun, hot sauce... AND put it on the White Castle slider, move over the kid, let dad have a taste. I ate a lot of food. But, while I probably account for 45-50% of my 4 people's family food budget, compared to normal humans at 30-35%?, my family will still eat an average of $900-1000/month. That's roughly equivalent to: $12,000 per year spent/4,380 meals per year = $2.74/meal. Now, when I came across your website, and many others, people claimed to spend not even $1/meal. my son wasted $1/meal without trying!! The dog mistakenly devoured $0.25/meal without being reprimanded. This Mormon colleague you have is showing another day's claim that he can reach an average level of $0.95/meal. [((700*12))/(8*3*365) = 0.958 $/ ?!?!?!? I called shenanigans and malarkey at once!!!! Here's what I want to know, if you're willing to listen and assist me in uncovering the truth: Are these people for REAL?!?!? Can someone really really this thrift level, or do they actually deny the truth and categorize food in another bucket? Don't they count eating out? Don't they count the staple foods? Do they steal food; on WIC; eating at Mom &amp; Dad's; food bank?!?!? I'm being literal, I can't understand how to reduce my food spending level to $346.75/month ($0.95 avg/meal for my extended family of 4). That's our monthly expenses at COSTCO!!! Yes, we have room for improvement, but these other people have to live on a 40-acre farm in the tropics, grow their own produce and barter rum for beans or something, right? Tell me I'm not crazy!!!! If you look at this rationally, the cheapest food I know, macaroni and cheese..... even organic macaroni and cheese.... standard, horrible, tasteless, terrible for you (probably, according to some dainty nutritionist) Kraft, not clams, mac and cheese. It costs $0.33/serving (Walmart prices everywhere $0.98 per box/portion amount (3) on the label), without the addition of milk and butter. Throw those tasty ingredients into the mix and you see $0.49/serving (again Walmart price; 1/4 stick butter $0.25/3 and $0.25/3 for 1 cup of milk) for the most ridiculous absolute small portion of sustainability, edible, near-food, food on the market. THAT'S FOR MACARONI AND CHEESE, my friend!!!! I don't know many American families, blessed with children, who DO NOT at some point serve one or two Macaroni and Cheese dishes (and this is the bottom of the rung brand in sophistication, flavor, and price). In addition, for dirt and giggles, let's say that your 14-year-old child is not satiated by 1/3 of a box of macaroni and cheese. You've only got another $0.50 in that food to maintain and grow that bottomless hole. What if, INSHAALLAH, the 14-year-old ate TWO PORTIONS!!!! AAAAAHHHHHHH Humanity!!!! It's not a joke. The internet is dotted with rapturous eating stories by teenagers. It could happen to you!!!! So, I say we try and find foods that are healthy and filling and fit within the $1/meal restriction. I don't think that's possible. You think I'm crazy..... or is this Mormon starving his relatives? Thanks for reading, I'd be more than willing to help show you my documented expenses over the years!!!! This fellow Mormon Braden refers to here is Mr. Dan Miller – a blogger friend of mys who wrote an interesting post for us last week with a budget of $5,000/mo for his family of 8 (2 parents, six children). Where $600-$700 goes to feed his entire clan every month (Braden works this out to be $0.958/meal). good reading if you haven't checked it out already... And out of curiosity, I certainly had to get documentation of this Braden man who had been meticulously collected over the years :) You can download it here for your viewing pleasure:What are you?What You think? Is it possible to live off $1.00/meal?? Are you struggling with the cost of food as well, or do you find that the media happy? Please share in the comments below... And bonus points for dropping * your own food costs too! The last time we did this, we had nearly 200 people share and it has become one of our most popular posts on the site. How much do you spend a week on groceries? Thank you so much to Braden for keeping it real and letting us through this... Let's hook up I—— PS: A little bird told me our Mormon friend would be right back here to :) Thanks Digg.com. I discovered the new online sitcom God, Inc. Best described as The Office in heaven, the comedy revolves around various departments that work for God, such as Population Control and Miracles. The show brings office politics to divine works and a great picture of life on earth. There are two episodes online and writer/director Francis Stokes promises more. Look: God, Inc. Getty Images North America/Getty Images News/Getty Images Weather from any particular region is important because it has a considerable impact on water, sunlight and ecosystem temperatures, according to the University of Illinois. These factors play a serious role by influencing the types of plant and animal wildlife that can survive in the area. Certain weather patterns can also cause dangerous storms and natural disasters. Variations in patterns and long-term weather trends can result in certain areas getting more or less water or sunlight than other areas. All living things need water, but because some organisms need more than others. The weather in the ecosystem determines what kind of living things are best suited to live there. This principle also applies to the amount of sunlight. The intensity and duration of sunlight in an area determines whether it can sustain different species of plant life or not. According to the University of Illinois, weather can also have a serious impact on life, both humans and animals, in the short term. Natural disasters such as hurricanes and tornadoes result from a combination of certain weather patterns and can injure or kill thousands of people depending on their scope. These disasters often do lasting damage to cities and ecosystems as well. Therefore, being able to predict and understand weather patterns is a very useful skill when preparing for disasters. Different cultural names ascribed to God include Yahweh, Zeus, God, Vishnu, Xavier and Jah. Depending on religion, believers may view a god as a personal being, an impersonal force, a single god or one a god among many. The gods mentioned in the Bible include Baal, who was worshipped by the ancient Canaanites, and his father Dagon, described as half human and half fish. The main deity of ancient Rome was Jupiter, which was considered roman equivalent Zeus, the Greek god of heaven and thunder. The ancient Hebrew alphabet had no vowels, so the name of the God of Israel was spelled YHWH and commonly known as tetragrammaton, meaning four letters. Scholars are unsure how the name is pronounced, and some believers today refer to the Judeo-Christian God as Jehovah, while others use the name Yahweh. Muslims use the name of Allah, which is the Arabic word for Allah. Although Hinduism receives many different representations of God, most Hindus worship personal gods in the form of Vishnu or Shiva. Sikhs use the name Waheguru, while members of the Rastafari movement use the name Jah. The Ethiopian Orthodox Church refers to God as Xavier, and the Maasai of East Africa, who believe in a God who is not male or female, use the name Ngai. Tanja Luther/Getty Images The three main names of God in the Old Testament were Yahweh, Adonai and Elohim. Many of the names of God written in the Old Testament are transliterations of the original Hebrew name, while others are translations of the meaning of the name. Yahweh is a transliteration of the un-voweled Tetragrammaton, which is the four Hebrew consonants that stand for the ancient Hebrew name for God. Many Bible scholars agree that Yahweh drew particular emphasis on the covenant nature of God. The name Adonai is translated God in the Old Testament. In Hebrew, adon indicates a master, ruler, or husband. God as Adonai, the Bible emphasizes God's possession or sovereignty over all things. Elohim translates to God and is technically a plural noun. Bible scholars agree that the Old Testament did not mention the God of the Bible Elohim because there were many gods, but because using the plural was a means of showing honor. Honor.
