Sunsets represent warmth and beauty, often often in a character's life, so descriptions tend to have a peaceful and melancholy tone. When writing about sunsets, focus on the visual aspects of heaven and how sunset makes characters in your story or poem feel. Use literary devices to develop imagesUsing literary devices, such as symbolism and images, to describe natural beauty, warmth and the transitional elements of a sunset. For example, Emily Dickinson examines the wonder of nature by describing the Rising and the Sun in her poem, I'll Tell You How the Sun Rose. It uses the metaphor of yellow children climbing and playing until it gets too dark to play longer to describe the changing colors of the sunset, from yellow to gray. Hazel Hall uses images in her poem Twilight to show how sunset affects grass, flowers and plants causing it to close overnight. His poem considers how sunset transforms the natural world. Focus on descriptive language, including compelling adjectives and perfect adverbs to help readers visualize the sunset. Use precise language, explicit vocabulary and well-constructed analogies to detail the complexities associated with sunsets, according to the Curricular State Basic Standards Initiative for 11th and 12th graders. Discuss color variations in the sky and how the scene sun casts shadows across the ground. Think of examples that remind you of sunsets, such as changing seasons, the aging process, or the end of one life experience to start another. Discuss the repeated cycle of sunsetsDestail the enduring, recurring, daily characteristics of sunsets. Poets such as Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and Robert Bridges, in their respective poems Sundown and The Evening Darkens Over, talk about how sunsets always lead to night and darkness. Both poets associate sunsets with the closure and end of daily experiences. Describe the sunset focusing on your brief, but important, role in nature. Use adjectives such as perpetual, relentless, timeless, irremeasible and foolproof, to describe sunsets. Discussing ways a sunset creates a mood or sets the tone of a poem or story. For example, in the book The Outsiders by S.E. Hinton, two main characters from different socioeconomic backgrounds talk about the beauty of sunset and their ability to bridge barriers to unite people. He describes how sunset makes characters feel, how relieved, satisfied or hopeful. Use emotion-filled adjectives such as majestic, endless, inspiring, bright, romantic, serene or captivating to describe sunset. As you've probably noticed, the words for term are listed above. Hopefully the generated list of words will out above your needs. If not, you may want to check out the related words – another project of mine that uses a different technique (not even if it works best with individual words, not phrases). The way the reverse dictionary works pretty simple. It is simply seen through tons of dictionary definitions and grabs the ones that most closely match your search query. For example, if you write something like longing for a while in the past, the engine will return nostalgia. The engine has indexed several million definitions so far, and at this stage is starting to yield consistently good results (though it can return strange results at times). It acts a lot like a thesaurus except that it allows you to search with a definition, rather than a single word. So in a way, this tool is a word search engine, or a phrase to word converter. I did this tool after working on Related Words which is a very similar tool, but uses a handful of algorithms and multiple databases to find words similar to a search query. This project is closer to a thesaurus in the sense that it returns synonyms for a word query (or short sentence), but also returns many widely related words that are not included in the thesauri. So this project, Reverse Dictionary, is meant to go hand in hand with related words to act as a set of word search and brainstorming tools. For those interested, I also developed Describing words that helps you find interesting adjectives and descriptors for things (e.g. waves, sunsets, trees, etc.). In case you don't realize it, you can click on the words in the search results and you'll be presented with the definition of that word (if available). The definitions are based on the famous and open source WordNet database, so a big thank you to the many contributors for creating such an impressive free resource. Special thanks to the contributors of the open source code that was used in this project: Elastic search, @HubSpot, WordNet and @mongodb.
