It's a bold strategy cotton gif

Bold Move Cotton, or Bold Strategy Cotton, is an advisory animal image macro series based on a screen haul from two sports announcers from the 2004 comedy film Dodgeball. The captions typically describe a controversial or risky course of action undertaken by an individual or group, followed by the sarcastic phrase It's a bold move Cotton, let's see if it pays off. Origin The original image comes from a scene in the movie Dodgeball in which ESPN8 sportscaster Cotton McKnight (played by Gary Michael Cole) announces that one of the finalist teams forfeited the championship, to which his fellow announcer Pepper Brooks (played by Jason Bateman) responds by calling the decision a bold strategy (shown below). It's a bold strategy Cotton. Let's see if it pays off for him. On February 25th, 2012, a Quickmeme page titled Bold Move Cotton was created, showing a screen captured image of the Dodgeball scene. In the first 16 months, the page accumulated more than 680 submissions. On April 19, 2013, Redditor wingsofgod filed an image macro with the /r/AdviceAnimals subreddit, citing the police arrest of the 2013 Boston Marathon Bombing Suspect Dzhokhar Tsarnaev (shown below, left). Within the first month, the post received more than 16,500 votes and 130 comments. On April 25, Redditor-toxic lights submitted an image macro to the /r/AdviceAnimals subreddit, which joked about hitting the snooze button on an alarm clock while it's already late for an engagement (shown below, right). On April 28, Redditor posted a video clip from the Dodgeball scene to the /r/videos subreddit in an attempt to record image macro incorrectly that misrepresented the word strategy for fat. In the next three weeks, the post received upwards of 680 votes and 50 comments. On May 19, Redditor oldswariz filed an image macro about a black minister who opened his sermon with a racial joke (shown below, left) to the /r/AdviceAnimals subreddit, where it commented more than 7,200 votes and 100 in the first month. On the next day, Redditor Ruri posted an image macro reference to the oft-combative restaurant owners on Gordon Ramsay's reality television show Kitchen Nightmares (shown below, right).
