St monica catholic school new orleans

St. Monica was built in 1924 on the corner of South Galvez and First Streets in New Orleans, Louisiana. It was built and opened with the hope of establishing a school for four hundred poor colored Catholic children who had no chance of a Catholic education. The Sisters of the Holy Sacrament (SBS) taught Sunday school to about one hundred and fifty children in the church, but they were alone for the rest of the week. In less than 6 months, St. Monica Catholic Church had a school. The school was dedicated on October 1924 and was run by two SBS sisters who commuted from Xavier University. All of Hicks siblings and their children attended St. Monica Catholic School. Nace Hicks, Sr., my grandfather, was one of the founders of St. Monica and he built an altar for the Blessed Mother with a place to kneel in the corner of every room, My mother, Augusta, was in the first graduating class. At the time, St. Monica Church and School was gray. In Mom's time, it was a four-room school that housed eight classes. When I was present, st. Monica had at least eight rooms, one room for each level. I remember my days in St. Monica. We wore uniforms, blue skirts and white blouses. Mom made our uniforms. The blouses were heavily starched, so much so, the collar would scratch our necks when we turned our heads. We lived in Dixie Court at the time and around the corner from cousins, Brenda and Linda. Every morning we dressed, picked up our cousins and walked to school with our lunch and book bags. On October 3, 1987, the First Annual Alumni Meeting was held and the Hicks family presented a card catalog and adictionary stand in honor and memory of Nace Hicks. The above photo was taken in 2003 or 2004 before Katrina hit the city. The Hicks/Estes family had a reunion in 2004 and we attended Mass at the church on Sunday. After Katrina, St. Monica was blinded and never reopened. It was merged with two other church parishioners and is now part of the Catholic Church of the Holy Trinity on Broad Street. Although, some of it has moved from Louisiana and some have moved to other church parishes, we still consider St. Monica as our home. In the wake of Sean Puffy Combs' recent gift of $500,000 to his university alma mater (see Puff Daddy Gives Alma Mater $500,000 for Scholarship Fund), rap mogul Master P has now come forward and donated $500,000 to keep one of his former schools from closing. Earlier this month, the Catholic Archdiocese of New Orleans announced plans to close St. Monica Elementary, the school P attended from the first to eight classes, and merge its 125 students into the Our Lady of Lourdes School by the end of the academic year. When Master was alerted to the possible closure, contacted the local archdiocese and made three separate contributions. P donated $250,000 to the ongoing of St. Monica, $150,000 to Our Lady of Lourdes and $100,000 to St. Matthias, a church attended by members of P's family. The No Limit entrepreneur also said he planned to remain active in helping his former elementary school for the next few years, and a representative of the New Orleans archdiocese confirmed that the monetary infusion would keep the school open for the foreseeable future. I graduated from St. Monica, Master P told The Times-Picayune. That school has been in my community my whole life. That's the church I'm committed to. When they told me what the situation was like, I thought this was a good opportunity to save some kids, to give them the chance I had. 2327 St. Saint MONICA CATHOLIC CHURCH, New Orleans, La. 70125 Xavier &gt; CAT+FD &gt; Schools &gt; St. Monica's Teachers at Thomy Lafon Elementary School, a New Orleans Public School, and St. Monica's Catholic School came back to school itself in August 2002.
