Types of facial piercings

The Pierce motorcycle from 1910 was the four-cylinder effort of the company that built America's first four-cylinder motorcycle. Unfortunately, the design -- and the company -- would be short-lived. Motorcycle Image Gallery Advertising Introduced in 1909, Pierce's four-cylinder model was influenced by FN four built in Belgium. The low-slung pierce, however, looked much more modern than the FN, and was a high quality bicycle built around a heavy tubular frame that doubled like fuel tanks and oil. The power came from a T-headed engine moving at 700 cc -- about 42 cubic centimeters. The engine was a stressed part of the frame and drove the rear wheel through a closed shaft, another American first. The first models were direct drive, no clutch and no gearbox; in 1910, a clutch and a two-speed transmission were added. Pierce's four were an expensive car that saw limited sales. Although a single-cylinder model with less expensive similar design was offered, both were rumored to have cost more than their retail prices to build, and financial deficits forced the company to close its doors in 1913. But it sounds kind of boring, don't you think? Many people have piercings like that, but what about those would be cyber bites, Medusa and daith piercings? You don't see them every day, so in this pierced test, you'll be suited to something rarer and unique! Have you ever heard of an anti-eyebrow piercing? This is located on the corner of the eye, on the opposite side of the eyebrow. They usually come with two studs, although some people use three or more. This is also a great option for those who want to make a bold statement, since this piercing can be easily seen by others. But maybe you want a piercing that's a little more hidden. In that case, how about a triple helix piercing? These three piercings are located on the top corner of someone's ear, and earrings that are usually used decrease from a large size to a small one (or vice versa). So if you want to jump out of your comfort zone or want to take a few baby steps out of it, we have a unique type of piercing for your personality! So we thought it was wise to go to her to treat our dark complexion, which can handle shades of adventurous makeup, but reject even the shyest skin products, turning rough and annoyed from washing the face and fine scrubs. McDonald rated the damage-dehydration and mild eczema—then got to work remedying it. After steaming, she performed a few extractions on our noses, then applied a creamy shell to pull the gunk out of more sensitive areas. We left with zero signs of irritation, and our face shone positively - no need for electric pink lipstick. Tracie MartynFacial, $450101 Fifth Ave., 11 fl.212-206-9333Martyn likes the color purple. Hints of her decorate every inch of her plush studio. But the new Purple Ray facial here is anything but a strip. Designed specifically for clients and celebrities (such as Kate Winslet and Julianna Margulies) who want to address signs of aging as well as occasional breakout, this treatment gets its name from the simultaneous use of red and blue LED lights, which speed cell turnover and kill bacteria. After spending 20 minutes under the rays, Martyn applied a moisturizing mask, then ran non-invasive electrical currents on our face to stimulate circulation, to finish, she spritzed on a refreshing, peptide-rich oxygen mist. The result of all efforts: an immediate improvement in the tone and texture of our skin. Facial, $150224 5th Ave.646-330-0768I had a new baby-and dark circles to prove this. Desperate some coddling of ours, we have booked a meeting with DeSimone, who has a reputation for healing fragile skin. I told her that we are nurses, and she prescribed a facial with natural products safe enough to eat. Then he put us to sleep with a 30-minute facial massage, mixed a mask of yogurt and flaxseed on the spot and performed imperceptible extractions. That's how we left, we wondered at the difference: We got sallow and drained, but left radiant and relaxed. Facials, $200 and upThe Greenwich Hotel, 377 Greenwich St.646-203-0045As a beautiful woman, Spa Shibui wants to be respected for his mind as well. I did, but first I couldn't stop gawking at the indoor pool-an amazing flashlight-lit grotto-that I soaked in until I cut. When we were ready for the facial treatment, our aesthetician led us to a treatment room, where he mixed our skin with biopeptide creams, a mask rich in antioxidants and light extractions. By the end, our shiny complexion never looked more beautiful -- or brighter. Mali AminiFacial, $70 and up421A Church of St.Vienna, VA703-255-7237Amini first won us over with compliments (Your skin is so awesome!), then made us cringe after microdermabrasion, showing us the gunk collected in the machine filter-not a pretty view. But things took a more appealing turn when he covered our hands in paraffin-lined gloves and kneaded our arms and shoulders. After a graceful progression of cleansers, creams, and a peel, I left with pores so immaculate and tight, I couldn't see them, even though I wanted to. Tina PrandeFacial, $130 and up9721 Little Santa Monica Blvd.Beverly Hills, CA310-717-8462The apple women reach a point in life when they have to accept the truth: Froufrou facials just don't cut it anymore. That's where Prande comes in. After rinsing off creams rich in peptides and using a motorized brush to apply a grapefruit scrub, she passed a high-frequency wand on our face to help speed healing and neutralize bacteria. We appeared with visibly brighter, smoother skin, and a week later, our spots were nonexistent. Prande really means business. It made our skin flexible and soft, with a few puffs of steam, then dislocated the blackheads from the problem areas, would be our chin. To temper redness, she applied a cooling mask, then treated us to a massage, moving smoothly from our temples to our chin. What about the high note? post-facial escapes. Melissa FoxFacial, $100 and up4425 Ponce by Leon Blvd.305-443-6606Feel: Part medical practice, three parts contemporary art gallery, with dermatologist Fredric Brandt collecting sculptures and photos on screen at every turn. Also, Fox addressed our complicated skin concerns a patch of eczema on our chin, red cheeks, and chronically congested pores under our noses-with a 2 percent lactic acid peel, gentle extractions, and antioxidant-infused oxygen. Bottom line: Thanks to a snafu reservation, our first appointment was never scheduled, but Fox more than saved the experience a second time. Her knowledge of dermatology and skin care ingredients was impressive; Massage her killer shoulder all the more so. And she was the first facialist to make our perfect skin even glow-y (our bill: $125). Lauren SalesClassic European Facial, $85,386 Minorca Ave., Coral Gables305-448-9400Sales asked for a steady stream of questions (about our skin, our career, and even our favorite charity) to try to distract us while she squeezed every inch of our face and-on a very unorthodox note-our ears. Although we didn't appreciate her thorough extractions at the time, our skin did: It was very clear when we left. Anyone who prefers meditative facials, however, should look elsewhere. Facial Maintenance, $45,275 N.E. 18 st., Ste. 109305-758-5750Too many nights past midnight left us looking like Cinderella-fairy godmother. What better way to clean our act than with a pumpkin-based facial? Our facialist hid us under the sheets in our clothes and smoothed out on a chamomile cleanser. Then she applied the mask of pumpkin papaya enzymes liked tingly and put us under steam. After rubbing on a grape seed toner, she used an ultrasound tool to tighten pores, reduce bacteria, and increase collagen production. A quick face massage and I was off to find Prince Charming.Tatum FrittsRevitalizing facial, $145 and up1410 20th St., Ste. 205305-531-5994I spoil our complexion, but when he recently threw a tantrum, I called Fritts. She examined our clogged pores, then fought them with an ultrasonic exfoliator, where ultrasonic to kill bacteria, and electric microcurrents to tighten and tone. After 90 minutes, we felt disciplined for bad behavior. But two days later, our skin was clear and babysoft. babysoft.
