To make it easier, in this post we cover everything you need to know about free nightly certificates from your Marriott Boundless credit card. How to get marriott free night award marriott free nights are the annual benefits you receive when you renew your account each year. Currently, there are three Marriott Bonvoy cards available to new applicants that offer an anniversary free night certificate. Depending on your annual card fee, you get a free night of up to 35,000 points or up to 50,000 points. Marriott Boundless and Marriott Bonvoy Business™ American Express® Card provide free nightly certificates of 35,000 points per night. Typically, to earn 50,000 points for a free nightly reward, you will need to own a Marriott Bonvoy Brilliant™ American Express® Card. All that is required to earn a free night certificate is to stick to the card after the first anniversary and pay an annual fee. After the first year, you receive a free night certificate of 35,000 points (or less) per night. What's more interesting is the fact that bonvoy marriott uses peak/off award prices. Each property is assigned a category number that determines its standard reward price. However, the same property may charge a little more or less depending on the season. To use the free night certificate, the hotel must charge a fee for the stay at or below the value of the certificate at the night you wish to redeem. It is possible to receive hundreds of dollars from a free 35K night certificate made at a Category 5 property. You have twelve months to use the nightly reward certificate after the certificate is issued. However, unlike free IHG night certificates, you need to complete a free night's stay within these twelve months, not just make a reservation. Z said that Marriott made an exception this year in response to COVID-19. If the certificate is to expire in 2020, Marriott has extended its validity until January 31, 2021. How to redeem Marriott Bonvoy Free Night certifications when you're ready to purchase a free night certificate, start by going to the Marriott homepage. There, the process largely reflects the process of booking points. Enter the desired location and dates, then select the Use points/certificates check box: you'll see all the properties that match your search, with their corresponding reward rate. As long as the rate is at or below the certificate value, you should be able to book a free night. In this case, suppose you have a 35K certificate to use and want to reserve Blackstone (category 5 property) in Chicago. When you select View Prices, you'll see a screen that displays all your booking options, including rates for point reservations, cash reservations, or a combination of both. Select a points stake. On the last booking page you will see a box that says You have eligible e-certificates matching your booking. Here you can use points to make a reservation or redeem a certificate. If you choose to redeem your certificate, it will disappear from your Bonvoy account once your booking has been confirmed. In this case, a 35,000 certificate saves you more than $300 compared to booking the same room at the cash rate! Plus, if you feel like it, you can add $90 to your 50,000 certificate and put you in a waterfront villa! JW Marriott Phuc Quoc Emerald Bay Resort & Spa (category 5) JW Marriott Phuc Quoc Emerald Bay Resort & Spa is a gem on a beautiful part of the Vietnamese coast. Track Your Marriott Free Night Certificates with AwardWallet The only downside to earning Marriott free night certifications is the need to track them. No one should go through the pain of realizing accidentally let one expire. Fortunately, AwardWallet makes it easy to stick to all the free nightly rewards. If you add your Marriott account to AwardWallet, you'll receive emails reminding you when your certificates are nearing expiration. This makes using them (and not losing them) much easier. Final thoughts We love hotel credit cards that offer free nightly rewards. In almost every case, a free night easily justifies an annual fee, even before taking into account other benefits. No card is better than a Marriott Boundless. The 35K free night award jubilee certificate easily justifies an annual fee of $95. Finally, don't get caught thinking that you need to use certificates at the highest category hotel possible. Although we used comparable cash values as the above value metric, there are other ways to calculate their value. For example, I often use certificates for last-minute accommodation in airport hotels. It's simple, convenient and saves me from paying in cash when I don't want to. In addition, waiting for the perfect moment to purchase a certificate is a recipe for it to expire unused.
