cbssports.com - Who should you start and who should sit in week 15? Lineup Cheat Sheet combines Fantasy analysis and game-flow predictions with a reliable scale to give you a definitive answer on the most difficult line decisions. It's pretty simple: the scale goes from 1 to 10. The higher the number next to a player's name, the more confident you should be to start it. Numbers are not a projection, just a trust score to help you choose who to start. cbssports.com - Fantasy lineup calls for Week 15. Dec 20, 2020 at 12:19 PM ET9 min read Getty Images A mea culpa: Last week, I made the fateful choice of sit Miles Sanders in my Fantasy lineups. I feel like a colossal idiot, because I would have advanced in my favorite league had it started (or if Giovanni Bernard hadn't groped, or if Mark Andrews had another 10 feet, or a couple of other things that didn't happen). Why did I put him on the bench?
