I like to write and speak languages; in addition, I like to help people passionately make public speeches. Giving the 50th (Golden) wedding anniversary in a SpeechGiving speech after 50 years of marriage sounds like it would be really easy, but expressing your emotions is not always easier. In fact, sometimes it becomes more difficult, because the feelings grow stronger, deepen and become more complex. Whether you're a husband, wife, or dear friend giving a speech, it can be hard to find perfect words to shroud a love that has been able to withstand all decades. But you don't have to worry. Below you will find great examples of toast! Example of Wives Golden Anniversary SpeechFirst, I want to thank you all very much for your arrival. I can't begin to describe how much it means to Reginald and I that you are here with us to celebrate our 50th wedding anniversary. Reggie, we've been married for fifty years. What was I thinking?! I'm kidding, of course. I still remember the day before, so many years ago, when you became my husband. There was rain, and you were sure that you would hold an umbrella over my head, that no drop of rain touched my head. It was a beautiful ceremony. I remember looking into your eyes as we quoted our vows. It was at that time that I knew that my life was exactly what I wanted it to be. You have been a huge inspiration to me throughout our marriage. Even when times were tough, you always remained positive. When Emily was born and had to stay in the intensive care unit for several months, she always tried to stay positive. Your insurmountable strength has helped me find my fortitude. You inspired me to be a hard worker. After the twins came and I had to work to take care of them, you took a second job to have enough money. I don't know how you did it — in the days when you had to wake up at five in the morning and not drag yourself back into the house until ten o'clock that night. You were exhausted, but never managed to give me a kiss and talk to me about your day. Sometimes you fell asleep while I was talking, but I knew you were still hearing me. So I keep talking to you. These are the days that I think about when I think the world is just too much when I think about quitting my job when a car crashes, when life throws me a curveball. That's when I think about those nights when you drag a tired body into the house, exhausting yourself to take care of us. Reggie, you made my life just amazing. I want you to know how happy you made me, but words can't describe it. You have enlivened my life in many ways - large and small. Having you wake up next to me for the last five decades and knowing that you are there for me too thick and thin has completely changed my life. It is for these reasons that I would like to donate to you. This is our photo years ago and one of us today with a quote weaving between them. The photos illustrate how our love has grown and lasted, and the quote reflects many years of love that we have yet to come. Thank you very much for marrying me. I love you. Example Of a Man's 50th Anniversary SpeechLet gave me a start to my speech welcoming each of you who came to share this memorable event with us. Carla and I are very much honored by your presence, and we appreciate you helping to make this day more memorable. Wow, I can't believe I was married to the same woman I exchanged vows with 50 years ago! Looking at you, my beautiful Karla. You looked the same as you did when you walked down that past and into my hands on that phenomenal day, June 5, 1961. Since then, I have always considered myself the happiest person in the world. Looking back, I can't help but be surprised at how we could surpass every trial and the obstacles we faced in our marriage. You always said I was stronger, but it was you who gave me the strength I needed, especially in times when I felt like giving up. Thank you, Carla, you've always been there for me. I can't be as rich as Bill Gates. But having you for your wife is the most priceless treasure I could ever ask for. I have your lost love, loyalty, patience, and understanding. What else can a man ask for? It has not been that easy for us in the last five decades. We had a part of our problems, but together we managed to overcome them all. It was always George and Carla. We have to keep ourselves blessed because not all couples out there can do it far. Today marks another special moment in our lives: 50 years of marital bliss, and still counts! Carla, you're my wife and my best friend. I'll love you forever, 'til death is partly for us. What should I say in the 50th anniversary of The Star? If you want truly breathtaking, tear-jerking, sincere and sentimental speeches, the focus on these elements is ideal:As a partner was helpful Happy Memory Time, when the mention of support was given to what helped the marriage survive so long Using the personal name sincere love confessions levlio dash Time when disasters were overcome by the Fair for us was something good for us. We met at the Border District Fair 51 years ago, and this year we celebrated our 50th wedding anniversary. By: Susan Dugdale | Last edited on 16 August 2018, at 18:48 Originally published as 08-01-2011 50th anniversary speeches! Here's a recipe that will help you tell the perfect golden wedding anniversary love story, make a toast for the 50th wedding anniversary. Whether you are a husband, wife, dear friend, or a child couple celebrates, you want the speech you give to touch the hearts and minds of everyone who hears it. Your goal is to distill the essence of 50 years of marriage in 4 to 5 minutes; make your audience laugh, cry a little and reflect. If this seems a little intimidating, I understand. ☺ Here is a logical step-by-step process that will take you through everything you need to do to achieve the desired effect. So follow you to take the time and follow it. What to put in the 50th anniversary? What to put in the 50th anniversary speeches: You will need jokes smattering These are those funny little stories that have become a legend over the years. Those tell of how this couple met and their courtesy. Who suggested to whom, when and how? Add a dash of wisdom or two What is glue that binds these two? Family law advocates Wilkinson and Finkbeiner have created a sober page about divorce in the US: 113 facts based on statistics. Number 17 out of 113 tells us that over a 40-year period, 67 percent of first marriages are terminated. Obviously, there is something special about keeping this marriage together. The 50-year partnership has values worth celebrating! Their recognition and sharing are truly inspiring to everyone. What are the positive qualities that are the basis of this marriage? Mix stories about family incidents, about hobbies or passions, times of trials and how they have been overcome, persistent and long-lasting habits, work, community and mutual friends. Much love for gratitude, gratitude, respect, admiration and recognition of the time and support provided by the service, sacrifices, and experiences shared. And a sprinkling of quotes Remember the usual saying, a line from a song or poem that has a personal meaning, a line, or a meaningful quote. (The link will lead you to a large eclectic, intersectional collection of wedding poems, quotes and readings, many of which are suitable for 50-year-old toasts.) Preparing your 50 toast first collect your ingredients. The easiest way to do this is a brainstorm, as shown in the picture below. Allow yourself at least 15 minutes of continuous, quiet time. In your mind, as bright as you can, see the couple you want to write about. Then on a blank piece of paper and without any thought about order (the beginning, middle, or end of your speech) start entertaining ideas when they come to you. (You can open a new document and do so on your computer as too. I just happen to make it easier to achieve ideas with a pen in hand.) Make movies in your mind Think about photos and make them large, multi-colored. Now add sound, smell, feelings or taste to bring those memories back to life. It's like making movies in your mind! As each image/thought emerges out the attention down to a single word or phrase – just enough to serve as a pin to keep on top of the idea safely. You'll go back to it later to detail in detail if you decide you want it. Don't live too long on one idea. Work fast and continue to go until you run out of ideas, time or paper! Review and view Now, go back through your notes and review them. Get rid of the weak and keep only the best or strongest ideas; Make sure that everything you've passed matches the tone you want to reach and is relevant to your audience. Ask yourself: Did you cover all the areas you wanted? Is there too much of any single topic? Isn't there enough for someone else? Tweak it as long as you have a balance as you want it. Your Brainstorm notes can be covered with circles, arrows, and bits written down. You can even do another until you think you are ready to move. Organize your golden wedding anniversary speech With your notes ready to go you are ready for the next step; to organise the language. Here you will get a stream of your material. You decide who will be the first. What happens next? And what is the link between these ideas? Do you see a theme that brings together all your material? Get a blank language outline template to complete if you're relatively new to languages, it might be helpful for you to read my page on how to arrange your speech. This will give you a better understanding of structure what you want to say. You are find the speech structure template you want to download. This will help you structure the opening, body and conclusion of your speech - to ensure that your notes are the best and most effective. You may not need or use any actions I put in the structure. But what is absolutely certain is that you will need a basic three-part format: introduction, body and conclusion. Rehearsing your language Writing language is only part of the process. Rehearsal is very important if you want it to be memorable for the right reasons. When you practice it out loud you will find out if it's too long, too short, the content doesn't flow as well as it can or may even contain parts that require a complete overhaul. If possible, give your speech to a couple of close family members or friends and ask them for feedback to help you adjust. Practice as well if you can spot it. This will give you an idea of how much volume you need to be listened to and where to stand for everyone. The more practices you do, the better it will be! Please don't tempt the wing of it.&#32;&#32;Be able to rehearse your language related links will help you prepare: And if you are really stuck, you might want to take this offer....
