'-Genesis 1:1There is no other book that can make people's thoughts just like birth. This is because of everything that believes a completely literal account of what happened, and because of the book's more symbolicity or speculation that believes and the way things actually happened can be very different, both often it is dangerous to understand people as a whole of Christianity as opposed to the approach. And of course, those who are not completely false to the Bible that are born and used as evidence, because science says it has not happened as stated. But is this true? Does the Bible actually explain what happened to science? And is it a direct, six-day- long description of god and god-created? There are some things in the Bible text that i think otherwise and I'm looking for them in the next few weeks. Creation stake dissonant Ou Fagurado YThis first part of creation in the first two days and third with the creation of the earth. Now, in birth. Birth 1:3' and God said that light be, and there was light. 'Sounds quite simple, now the light appeared. But is it obviously light? The unliteral study of the generation dictionary Ou Fagurado YA deletes this Bible message and finally attacks god's character. 13. Genesis is also radical for many other important beliefs in the rest of the Bible, such as men, house and church loving head ships. The Bible crystal is clear. Young Earth-Kreatavanists, or more Bible-clyatonists, are 1 often accused of being literal in their interpretation of birth. Malal, this charge is a lataralstock interpretation as the position to the Karkatores who unfortunately explain their Hermanitax historical interpretation after the Bible's kreatavanists. All the light we know is now a drain from a source, traveling in a vittor, not just some unclouded clouds of Lomaniscanka. So what will be obviously this light, and who is it coming from? It could be lumanascanka from just some random point, maybe god by himself, or could it define a description of super hot plasma and gas to give light? The Big Bang Theory was nothing that was in essence, after today all the matter and energy in our universe burst out of a single point and started rapidly extending the indibriated, a giant explosion basically. This was the case in a time full of a huge amount of energy, and so it was all. A plasma state, too hot and continues to have large amounts of light because it has shed energy and spread out, the temperatures were still very high and the universe would be seen like a sea of light, until most started to meet in different local areas and started to form stars and planets.
