The glen movie theater times

A number of notable new films are set to hit theaters this week, from a highly anticipated action comedy to a critically acclaimed biographical drama. Can't decide which option you want to tick off? Here are the staff picks from the first three flicks to check out this weekend.

1. Love & Mercy Directed by Bill Pohlad, the biographical drama follows a parallel narrative covering two specific periods of life for beach boys frontman Brian Wilson. It begins in the late 1960s and follows Wilson (played by Paul Dano) as he stops touring, produces Pet Sounds, and begins to lose his sanity. In the 1980s, an elder Wilson (John Cusack, under the direction of a control therapist, finds a savior Melinda Ledbetter (Elizabeth Banks). The film, which comes from the title of the 1988 song Wilson, has been a festival darling, gaining widespread praise from critics at last year's Tribeca Film Festival and this year's South by Southwest. It currently holds an 88% fresh rating on Rotten Tomatoes, and critics call it deeply satisfying, emotionally acute and highly sensitive to the amorphous nature of Wilson's life and art. Dano has earned particular praise for his individual portrayal of a tortured but hopeful musical genius. Dano allows you to bleed, so the performance fee was invented. You can't take your eyes off it, Rolling Stone wrote of his performance. Banks also received praise for bringing warmth and humour to the film.

2. Spy Melissa McCarthy is back on the big screen, this time with CIA analyst Susan Cooper, who has spent her entire career desk tied and helping dashing agent Bradley Fine (Jude Law), despite his solid field training. However, when Bradley is killed by a Bulgarian arms dealer, Rayna Boyanov (Rose Byrne), Susan convinces her bosses to let her take on her first secret assignment to catch Boyanov and help avenge Bradley. The film unites McCarthy's bridesmaids director Paul Feig. The film has gained overwhelmingly positive reviews, currently holding a 94% fresh score on Rotten Tomatoes. The critically nominated Spy is one of McCarthy's best blockbuster comedies yet, praising Feig for being the funny actress in the vehicle, allowing her to embrace the full range of her comic abilities. As Variety described it: Melissa McCarthy gets the funniest, most versatile and endeous comic showcase of her film career in this deliriously entertaining action-comedy. Brynes, who is fast becoming one of the comedy's secret weapons, has also earned critical praise for his portrayal of his ferociously hilarious character and edgy chemistry with McCarthy.

3. Charlie's Country Director Rolf de Heer, the Australian drama film stars David Gulpili as Charlie, a warrior past the prime who lives in a remote Aboriginal community in the north of the country. As the increasing the stifling over the community's traditional lifestyle, Charlie finds himself caught between two cultures. Once the gun and the newly formed spear are taken away, eventually you will get fed up and decide to head into the wild on your own, live the old way. What he didn't consider was where he could end up or how much life has changed since the old days. The film, which aired at the Cannes and Toronto International Film Festivals last year, received critical acclaim with 92% support on Rotten Tomatoes. Aside from its unique use of Steadicam to follow Charlie's character as he quickly walks through the terrain, critics praised the film for its subtle and powerful depiction of a cultural shift and a man's determination never to lose himself. Gulpili, who appears in pretty much every scene and co-wrote the film, deserves individual recognition for his performance. It's a testament to what de Heer and Gulpili have achieved here – simplicity and infinite nuance – that all the highs and devastating lows... The character's identity continues to be sensed in every aspect of the performance, The Hollywood Reporter wrote of the film. If you're looking to take a break from summer blockbusters and look at a more complex and layered drama, this movie is for you. More Entertainment Cheat Sheet: Sheet
