Sign up and successful entrepreneur Richard Koch and venture capitalist Greg Lockwood have spent years researching what makes successful companies – IKEA, Apple, Uber and Airbnb, among others – achieve game-changing status. The answer is: They simplify. Given this principle one step further, Koch has determined that companies will either be price-simplifiers – such as flying with a budget airline stripped of extras that will still take you from point A to B – or offer slushers like Apple, which is determined by its easy-to-use products for a large market that wants to pay a premium. Under Simplification, you'll learn how:• Decide which simplification strategy is the best solution for your business. • Model your business as a bid or offer to simplify. • Make your products and services more useful and better-looking. • Transform your business process and transform your industry into nine steps. • Use the three basic principles of the price revolution.
