The chi season 2 episode 6 recap

Counting On returned on February 11, 2019, for Season 9, with significant changes coming to the Duggar family. Season eight ended with the marriage of Josiah Duggar and Lauren Swanson. Now that the couple has settled into married life it's time for another sibling to take the next step. With so many duggar kids heading into the next phase of their lives, there's always more than one surprise around the corner. The opening scene of The Counting On season 9 opener takes viewers to Jinger and Jeremy's house in Laredo, Texas. Jinger, now at 38 weeks pregnant, is preparing late for the arrival of her first daughter, and Jeremy will help her. Jeremy decided to cook dinner; Figuring a spicy meal can kickstart a mother-to-be body in action. One too much pepper, however, leaves the couple and crew crying and coughing. It all ends well when Jeremy's take on chicken Masala is delicious. While dinner is lovely, a spicy meal does nothing to send Jinger into labor. In Arkansas, children left at home join a spicy party and take part in a spice challenge. Joyanna and Austin are coming out after their third taste test, as are Ben and Jessa Seewald. Lauren refused to taste any spicy conco fabrications, but is willing to smell them. Josiah gives it all a taste, but the winner of the challenge is younger brother Jason. John-David is planning an engagement return to Arkansas John-David is about to propose to his girlfriend Abbie. The 28-year-old bachelor has been seeing Abbie for several months and is ready to dive. He called a photographer in a small town in Texas to help. Lori, a photographer, agrees to set up the perfect deal for the couple at the Hangar Hotel, a local landmark that uses vintage planes in its décor. John-David is hypnotized for his proposals. He says the plane hangar makes perfect sense because he and Abbie went on a first date together, but he has to figure out how to drag her to Texas without making her suspicious. He enlisted his twin sister Jana for help. Jeremy loses his beloved jersey collection Back in Lorado, Jinger enlisted the help of sisters Jesse and Jane, and family friend Laura, to devise the perfect nursery for the upcoming baby. Jinger and Jeremy know they're going to be welcoming a little girl, but they haven't picked a theme for the nursery yet. Jana and Jessa take the pressure off and decide on the Southwest theme, given that the couple enjoy living in Texas. Jeremy has a moment of panic when his framed football jerseys are taken off the wall. Looks like Jeremy didn't realize his prized possession was going to go to the garage. In the end, it doesn't matter, because the jerseys go to the warehouse and Jeremy goes to church. By the time Jeremy gets home, the room is ready, and the couple is officially ready for. the first child together. Jinger tells her sisters that she's nervous about the impending birth, but Jessa assures that everything will be fine. In the interview segment, Jessa, Joyanna and Kendra discuss their recent births. Jessa notes how hard her efforts were at home, while Joyanna mentions that the pain wasn't nearly as severe as she thought it would be. Kendra falls somewhere in the middle, claiming childbirth is difficult, but she knew it was for the greater good. Joyanna's delivery ended in an emergency C-section. Her first child, Gideon, arrived healthy and happy. Jessa had a natural birth with her first son Spurgeon, but was rushed to hospital immediately upon arrival. Kendra opted for a hospital delivery with her first child with husband Joe Jinger explaining that she changed her birth plan from a delivery center to a hospital delivery after her sisters had such a difficult moment. Jinger and Jeremy explain that they felt it best to work in a hospital given that several family members had emergency C-sections. John-David asks the big question John and Jana are arriving in Oklahoma to take Abbie and her sister Maggie on an adventure. They're taking a plane that John's flying and landing in a small town in Texas. Fredricksburg, Texas is an 11,000-year-old city. Abbie has to trust John because for once he doesn't wonder where they're going or why they're in the middle of nowhere in Texas. The foursome enjoy a light evening together before heading for the plane hangar. John covers the proposal by telling Abbie he wants to show her the old plane. Abbie is totally fine with this request, leaving viewers wondering how many vintage planes she looked at during their brief courtship. The couple enters a hangar that has a heart of rose petals on the floor. We give up John takes over and asks Abbie if she wants to keep flying with him. When they reach the middle of the heart, John draws a printed speech, though he has a hard time getting through it without giggling. Finally, he said, I was wondering if something was going on for the rest of my life. When she replies that nothing is in stone, she asks if she would like to spend the rest of her life with him. Abbie says that, insisting that she would be honored to marry him. They engage in a hug to seal the deal. Jinger goes to the hospital The final scene in the first episode of season nine takes viewers to the hospital, where Jinger is ready to induce. After meeting with her midwife, it seems like the baby is ready for its grand entrance. Michelle Duggar, like Jeremy's parents, are in town for the birth, and Jana plans for her to take him to San Antonio to be there. Jessa and Ben showed up in Texas with their two sons to surprise the couple. Jinger's birth, however, will have to wait until next week, as TLC ran Time. Claire Tries to Make Penicillin Caitriona Balfe | Michael Tran/Getty Images Claire Fraser (Caitriona Balfe) tries to make penicillin. He teaches Marsala (Lauren Lyle) how the episode opens. Claire asks Marsala how she knows what to look for when it comes to mold. Marsali tells her which colored molds are bad and which are good. Claire thinks she's tempting fate by trying to create penicillin. Jamie (Sam Heughan) returns home to Claire. He told Claire that Knox killed one of the regulators. Clare's glad he freed the rest of the men. Jamie tells Claire that regulators now have an army and are willing to fight for their beliefs. Claire leaves with Jamie Jamie telling her that soon she will leave again with reinforcements from her country. Claire says there's nothing written about regulators she's come across in the future. Claire says she's coming with Jamie to look for regulators. He says he's going to need a doctor, and Jamie agrees that he's always needed her and he's always going to need her. Jamie tells Fergus (César Domboy) that he will go after regulators. He gave a commercial looking for men to recruit. Claire and Jamie are leaving Fraser's Ridge. Claire bids farewell to daughter Brianna (Sophie Skelton). They say I love you and I'm leaving. Brianna also bids farewell to Roger (Richard Rankin), who seems nervous about what the future will bring. Claire finds out the truth about Stephen Bonnet When they arrive at their camp for the evening, Jamie tells Claire about Stephen Bonnet. He's still alive and his body was never found in the prison explosion. Sightings of Bonnet have also been confirmed. Claire's glad Bri doesn't know, but viewers know she actually knows after his father's hassle of conversation. The Beardsleys entering the scene Josiah was caught stealing groceries. Claire asks him what he's doing in the camp. Jamie pulls out another boy who looks like him. Looks like they're twins. Jamie asks Josiah for the truth. Turns out Josiah and Keziah were nailed to the Beardsleys. Josiah escaped a year ago. Keziah can't hear that well since he was five years old and hurt by the man he was indentured to. Jamie says he'll pay their fees to free them. Jamie and Claire are going to see the Beardsleys. Jamie comes across a woman on the property who says her husband is dead and I can keep the servants. Claire says the place is very strange and we should leave. Jamie asks his wife again for indentured servant paperwork. Things become With Beardsleys Claire suspecting something was up, especially with the way it smells in the house. She went upstairs to investigate. She discovered Mr Beardsley suffering a stroke. He's been lying in the same spot for weeks. His wife feeds him so he can suffer more. His wife says he hit her and picked her up. She tried to get away from him and he fell. She said she couldn't move it. Claire decided to help him and started cleaning his wounds. Claire realizes his wife tortured him by burning his legs over and over again. The man blinks and admits his wife did it. Claire refuses to leave the man. Turns out she wanted to die slowly. She's also pregnant and her water's breaking as she goes into labor. Claire's got her hands full when she delivers the baby, the girl. The child's father turned out to be African-American, so it can't be Mr. Beardsley's child. Mr Beardsley has skeletons in his wardrobe A woman reveals that a man took her out of Baltimore two years ago. Mr. Beardsley had several wives before her and they're all dead. He says he killed them all. None of them could have given him the baby. The woman was beaten like the twins. Claire suggests the woman keep the property. Claire says he's going to take her husband with him and he's never going to hurt her again. The woman reveals her name is Francis, or Fanny. Claire tells Jamie she wants Bri and Roger to go back to their time when they know if Jemmy can travel through the rocks or not. Jamie doesn't like the idea at all. They would be without their family, without their blood, Jamie tells her. Fanny leaves in the middle of the night without a child. She leaves papers for the twins to be free. Claire knows she's not coming back. Jamie tells Claire to go outside so he can kill Mr Beardsley. Jamie begs him to blink once for yes and twice for No. A man wants to die, and Jamie kills him. Jamie asks Claire to promise to grant him mercy and take his life if he ever ends up in a similar situation. Claire says she's going to do what she has to do for him. This concludes the recap of episode 3 of the fifth season of Outlander.
