Raines, 5:13-cr-00143-NAM)Click on summary – On March 19, 2014, Judge Norman Murdo sentenced convicted murderer and rapist David Raines to 30 years in prison for child pornography. He was released pending trial on those charges, and went on to kill the school librarian and rape a 10-year-old girl. [2] Raines pleaded guilty to murder and rape in July 2013 and faces life in prison without the possibility of parole on those charges. [3] Raines pleaded guilty to child pornography charges in October 2013. [4] During his sentencing hearing for child pornography charges, the attorney general asked Judge Murdo to give Raines a sentence greater than the 19 to 24 years recommended in federal guidelines because of the absolute evil of his actions. Murdo agreed with the prosecutor, and Raines was sentenced to 30 years in prison, respectively, for murder and rape. [2] $ 36 million in tax evasion and tax evasion (2013) (U.S. v. [5] [6] • New York 2012 Primary Date (2012) Click on summary – On June 27, 2012, Judge Gary Sharp issued a ruling setting the date for the New York congressional primaries as June 26, 2012. This date was 35 days before the deadline for the sending of absentee ballots abroad. New York had originally planned to hold primaries in early September, but the judge found that the original initial date was too late for obtaining recent ballots abroad. Nothing is more important to a vibrant democratic society than citizen participation in government by voting, Sharp wrote. It is unreasonable to send men and women abroad to preserve our democracy while at the same time ending them while in their absence. That is exactly what New York has done to some extent. Having had a great opportunity to correct the problem, it failed to find the political will to do so. However, many criticized the early date, claiming it would cause problems for New York's late redistricting process, leading many candidates to question the constituency in which they are running. Presidential primaries were held separately on April 24, 2012. [7] The Joseph Bruno Case (2009) Click on a summary -- presided over by Judge Gary Sharp e.g. former New York Senate Majority Leader Joseph Bruno. Bruno was accused of corruption in an attempt to his public office for personal gain. On August 21, 2009, Sharp rejected a request from Bruno's defense team asking the grand jury to put forward allegations that federal prosecutors were not sufficiently explicit in their findings to indict the former senator. [8] Bruno's trial began on November 2, 2009, when Bruno was tried on eight counts of federal corruption. [9] The trial ended on December 7, 2009, when a jury of seven women and five men convicted the former senator on two of eight corruption charges. [10] The former Senate leader was originally scheduled to be sentenced on March 31, 2010, but was postponed until May 6, 2010, under a judge's order on February 24, 2010. [11] On the same day, the judge rejected Bruno's lawyer's request for a new trial. [11] Judge Sharp said That Bruno's lawyers had failed to substantiate evidence beyond reasonable doubt to justify a new trial. [11] Former New York Governor George Pataki appealed to Sharp on May 4, 2010, to consider what Bruno did during his career before sentencing him. Although Pataki did not condone Bruno's actions, he felt that the crimes to which Bruno was convicted were incompatible with his character. Bruno's lawyers also asked the judge not to consider a prison sentence because of health issues faced by the former senator. [12] On May 6, 2010, Sharp sentenced former Senator Bruno to two years in federal prison. [13] Northern History is the successor to the original New York region, which was divided into the northern and southern regions on April 9, 1814. The U.S. District Court for the District of New York was the first district court to be convened under U.S. sovereignty, presided over by Judge James Duane on November 3, 1789. The Northern District was redivided in 1900, leading to the creation of the U.S. District Court for the Western District of New York. The province now covers 32 counties in upstate New York, with a broad border with Canada to the north. [14] Judicial functions highlight the development of judicial functions for the Eastern District of New York: [14] The former Chief Justice in order to qualify for the post of Chief Justice of a federal court, a judge must be on active duty on the court for at least one year, be under the age of 65, and has never served as Chief Justice. The chief justice fills a vacancy in seniority among the pool of qualified judges. The Chief Justice works for seven years or even the age of 70, whichever occurs first. A legal change in the 1950s led to the creation of a seven-year period. Age restrictions are waived if no member of the Court is eligible for this position. Unlike the Chief Justice of the United States, the Chief Justice returns to active service after the expiration of or her term of office and does not create a vacancy on the bench from the fact that he is promoted.
