The following article was written for antique publications in California and used in Kooks newsletters. So with our story: Do you believe that you'll see a churn dazey day will bring $2000+ at auction. A collector from Missouri recently attended an auction in Sedalia where a Dazey quartet brought in $271 0. At auction in Columbia, MO., the arrogant advantage of one dazey quartet ranges up to $2500 and a round label one dazey quartet sold at $2100. We have collected Dazey and other churches for seventeen years. When we started, we thought that the price at the time was incredible, but as you saw from the recently paid price, we had a real bargain a year ago. I will tell the story we are dealing with the Dazey church. Our first dazey quartet was bought in two parts. Butch discovered the top in a junk store for $12.50 and through advertisements at Antique Dealers, jars bought for $280. I grew up that I had to pay a lot of that for the jar. In past years, you can buy regular dazey no. 40 for around $45 at any auction. I was broken. As time passes, we find more church dazey collectors. New collectors are quite aggressive and prices continue to rise to the point where they come out of the reach of older collectors. When the new breed finds that Dazey not only produces different sizes, they also different styles; the race is to complete a collection that contains all sizes and styles. We have also found real dead Dazey collectors, who have found most dazey churches and need another challenge, have now turned to other searches; looking for egg-beaters, mayonniss mixers etc. Butch and I are among the Guilty. In 1904, E.B. Jones had a small glass butter chum that he insinued Nathan P. Dazey. Dazey thinks the principle is good for making butter, although she thinks that a very raw dasher is used. Jones who was already in financial striates became ill and sent for Dazey to make a deal to market the chum. Dazey in his generous heartbreak told Jones that he would organize an advertising campaign, give him a third of interest in the new company, and lend money to him to pay his debts and give him a salary until the company starts. Dazey went to St. Louis and started a business. Jones got the better, but tired of sitting down and selling his interest back to Dazey for $1500. Dazey eventually sold Jones' stake to a man named Pollvogt who eventually sold his shares for half a million dollars. In 1910 Nathan's son Jack came into business and the company started growing. The company adds a church of other sizes as well as an electric journal for up to ten gallons. During World War I, there was a lack of butter and Dazey developed a church where you could add a pound of butter and a pound of milk and end up with two pounds of butter. The company did well during the war. In late 1920-1920 Dazey introduced the type of wall could be opened with a cutting wheel that revolutionized the opening industry. Currently church businesses are beginning to deteriorate as many farmers moved to towns and Dazey began producing other kitchen items. During World War II, Dazey issued heavy duty could open up for our government along with a 20 mm shell. In 1947 Dazey sold the company to a group of investors. The group was unsuccessful and a few years later sold the company to Pendatar, Frary and Clark, a Universal product manufacturer. In the early 50s Dazey was sold to a Rival Company of Dazey's name and the product was sold under Dazey's name to various stores. For your information, we receive this informative email and will share the information. We appreciate Mr. Richolson contacting us. Hi Butch: My name is Ron Nicholson and I have read your Dazey history. I worked for Dazey when they were in Kansas City, Mo. I believe your statement that Dazey bought by Rivals was incorrect. I was told that Mr. H. J. Talge bought Dazey and moved it to Kansas City, Mo and introduced electric kitchen utensils to the company. Perhaps the confusion occurred because Mr Talge started Rivals and sold the company before buying Dazey. Mr. H. J. Talge served as chairman of the board of directors, his oldest grandson Steve Talge was President Dazey and a younger grandson, Lisle Talge was V.P. of in charge of my engineering and boss. The middle generation, Foster Talge was active with Rivals but became inactive when his family bought Dazey. Rivals and Dazey are fierce competitors over the years. Mr. H.J. Talge is an interesting and old character allied with Harry Truman in the haberdashery business along with Eddie Jacobson. At the moment my wife and I own and operate a Faithful Peddler Antique Mall in Lamar, Mo.. As a side line, I met my wife while working in Dazey. Enjoy your website Ron Nicholson | Top | Home | Once part of daily domestic life sold for just a few dollars, the values of today's antique butter church may surprise you. These household items are proof of dairy history, and they come in a variety of different styles. Some are worth hundreds of dollars, especially if they are in good shape. Learn how to spot a valuable butter church. Understanding how old butter churn works can help you recognize them in antique shops and get a taste of various styles. At its most basic, butter church is a ship used by people to make butter the old way. To use it, one will pour the cream into the church. Then by turning on the handle, moving the wooden paddle or hitting up and down, or winding up the church, they will keep the cream moving continuously. According to American Scientific, the turbulence will cause fat molecules in the cream for clustering, forming butter. Depending on the number of creams and types of churches of butter, this process can take 20 minutes or more. Related Articles How Much Old Butter Churn Is Worth? While most people no longer use it for butter, antique butter churches can be as valuable as pieces of conversation or accomrection in your home or store. You can find them in antique shops, flea markets, and estate sales. They range in price from around $25 to more than $500. The value of churn antique butter depends on several factors, so if you are considering buying or selling one, check for the following: Conditions - Check for cracks or chips inside the butter church, as well as lost pieces and other signs of damage. Churches in excellent conditions hit the highest price. Age - Checking the church for clues about its age, because older churches are sometimes more valuable. One of the best ways so far the antique butter church is through patent numbers, which are often at the bottom of the church or in the metal part. You can find the patent number at the US Patent and Trademark Office and get the date it was released. Manufacturers - Many antique butter churches have stamps or manufacturer signs on them. Some rock or pottery manufacturers, such as the Red Wing, can be quite valuable. Materials and types - The materials used in churches and church types can affect value as well. Is it out of glass, stone, wood, or something else? Antiques Butter Values by Type Because there are so many types of church butter, it's important to distinguish them when talking about value. Here are some of the most common types of churches and what they are worth. Dazey church is made of clear glass with a metal top. The above is you can switch to making butter, and the glass balang lets you watch the progress. Since there are many of these antique glass butter churches, the value depends on the size and characteristics that are rare. These churches consist of small pint-sized balangs that you can hold in your hands to a larger ship that will sit on a table or floor. Larger churches tend to be more valuable. Most examples sell for under $25, but rare versions with horseshoes on them can sell for many times that price. Circumstances are also important. A dazey butter church six complete and usable quartet is on sale for $125 on eBay in 2020. Antique Wood Butter Churns on The Feet Some antique wood butter churches stand on the feet, and this can be among the most valuable. There are several church-shaped shapes with legs. Some have boats suspended at the foot, and you can shake them back and back to brag the cream. The other has a crease on the side, which you'll turn to messed up cream. Either way, finding this in good shape is not easy. If they are whole and usable, these churches may take hundreds of ringgit. For example, a four-foot bentwood church that sold for $350 on eBay. Vintaj Wood Butter Churns With Dashes Not all antique wood butter churches have legs. Some are made like barrels with staves joined together to embody a tight vessel of water for butter. It can also be valuable, especially if they have some paint of their origin or other unique features. Like their legged friends, this vintaj butter church is difficult to find in good condition. If you find a good form, it can be worth hundreds. For example, 19th century butter made from wood sold for $475; it still has its original blue paint recall. Antique Stoneware Butter Churns Although they are among the most commonly, the value of antique stone butter can be very high. These churches are made of pottery or stone and use a piece of wood to support the cream. Some are made by significant pottery such as the Red Wing or have salt glass and cobalt blue design, which can make them especially distributed by collectors. Vintaj stone churches in a less than perfect state or the resulting jisim sell for under $100, but typical examples by pottery are noted to sell even more. A complete Red Wing church is in excellent condition selling for $695. Important Part of Tenusu History Whether you see an antique wood butter church for sale or think of selling your Dazey church, knowing the value of antiques important. They are an important part of dairy history, and they can be more valuable than you initially thought. If you enjoy dairy-related antiques, consider reading on old milk lenses and bottles of antique milk. This looks great displayed with antique journals, especially in vintage kitchens or ice cream shops. Shops. Shops.
