Copyright © 2020 InfoSpace Holdings, LLC, a system1 Here are a few words about cancer that your family will probably need to know. You may want to tell them at a family reunion, so that all children (and adults) know what you mean when you use those words. Be sure to check for other words that have heard that I don't understand. Also tell them who they should ask if they hear other words they don't know. Older children may look for some of the words for themselves, but some of the more specialized medical terms can still be difficult to understand. Benign (be-NINE): no cancer (see also cancer, malignant). Biopsy (BY-op-see): A procedure that removes a small piece of tissue from a person's body so that a doctor can look at it under a microscope. This is done to see if a person has cancer and if so, what type it is (see also the tissue). Cancer: a name for the more than 100 diseases in which non-normal cells grow and divide rapidly. These abnormal cells usually develop in a tumor (or mass or lump). Cancer can also spread to other parts of the body from where it started. Certain types of cancers can grow in places like the bone marrow, where they do not make a tumor. Chemotherapy (KEY-mo-THAIR-uh-pee): also called chemo: a treatment that uses drugs to kill cancer cells. Common side effects of chemo include short-term hair loss, nausea and vomiting, sores in the mouth, feeling tired, and a higher likelihood of getting infections. The type of side effects a person has depends on the drugs they are receiving. All chemo medications do not cause the same side effects, and the same drug can cause somewhat different side effects in different people. Clinical trials: research studies created with human volunteers to compare new cancer treatments with standard or common treatments. Fatigue (fuh-TEEG): a common symptom during cancer treatment, a tired bone fatigue that does not improve with rest. For some, this may last some time after treatment. Malignant (muh-LIG-nunt): cancerous. Malignancy is another word for cancer. Metastasis (meh-TAS-tuh-six): the spread of cancer from one part of the body to another. The plural is metastasized (meh-TAS-tuh-sees). Oncologist (on-KAHL-uh-jist): doctor specializing in cancer treatment. There are medical, surgical and radiation oncologists. Prognosis (prog-NO-six): prediction of the course of the disease; prospects for survival. Protocol (PRO-tuh-call): a detailed standard plan that doctors follow when treating people with cancer. Radiotherapy: a cancer treatment that uses high energy rays to kill cancer cells. This treatment is given by a machine or by materials placed in or near the tumor. Side effects of radiotherapy usually appear in the part of the body being treated. For example: redness of the skin where radiation is given, hair loss if the head is being treated, and nausea if the stomach is being treated. Tiredness is the most common side effect of radiation. Cancer is back; cancer cells have begun to grow again after treatment. Relapse (RE-laps): the same as recurrence; cancer that has returned after a disease-free period. Referral Referral the disappearance or reduction of cancer symptoms in response to treatment. Remissions may be partial or complete; a complete remission means no sign of cancer is found in tests, scans and physical examination. Side effects: problems caused by treatments against cancer or other medications. Surgery: a procedure that normally cuts open part of the body. So does a surgeon, a doctor who is an expert in performing operations. Tissue (TISH-oo): a collection of cells that work together to perform a certain work or function in the body. Different parts of the body, such as the skin, lungs, liver or nerves can be called tissue. Doctors often tissue biopsy to find out if you have cancer cells in it (see also malignant, benign, biopsy). Tumor: an abnormal lump of tissue. Some tumors are cancer and some are not. There will be other words that apply to your family member's treatment that your child may want to learn. You can learn more about these words and what they mean www.cancer.org or call us at 1-800-227-2345. We can also help you learn more about the type of cancer you are treating, and answer your questions. Questions.
