Kingdom Come Superman is designed and carved by parent artist Alex Ross. Based on the Government's outstanding comics Come by Mark Waid and Alex Ross, this statue symbolizes a dark day in the life of the Man of Steel, and the emotions really pour the statue. This full color statue is what fans have been waiting for. A few years back, D.C. released a larger version of this statue, but it's not colored, it's a solid silver monochropy statue. The version is just screaming boring, and doesn't sell well at all. Some people are so disappointed in that version that they are actually commissioned professional artists to paint their silver version to full color. D.C. got a clue and eventually released this full color version of Man of Steel in all its glory.
