Ventus sheds tears, feeling he doesn't have his promise to Terra, but Terra-Xehanort's shadow breaks without its limitations and reveals itself as Terra's heart, breaking the chain of Ventus and Aqua and announcing that it sets things right. Sora then steps in to unlock Terra-Xehanort's heart to free Terra's heart from Xehanort's control and allow the shadow to regain Terra's body by restoring him. Ventus remains at Keyblade Graveyard, while Sora uses the site to fight Xehanort, alongside Mickey, Rick, Roxas, Xion, Lea, Agua, and Terra, to close Kingdom Hearts. After Xehanort's defeat, Ventus journeys through the portal of Scala ad Caelum alongside other guardians of the light. Here, Eragus' heart emerges from Terra's and demands that Xehanort put a x-blade. After some convincing, Xehanort left x-Blade to Sora, at which point Eragus turned his attention to his former pupil, apologizing to them for everything he'd put them through a tearful reunion before allowing his heart to pass alongside Xehanort's. With everything as it should be, Sora uses a ×-blade to bring them all back to the light realm. Ventus, Terra and Aqua give their masters a proper burial. Chirithy bounds over happily and leaps into his hands, cuddling him before being introduced to Aqua and Terra. After some time, Ventus joins Terra, Aqua, to unite with others on Destiny Island to celebrate his victory. They eventually watch the restored Cairo and Sora from afar as Sora disappears. Sometimes after that, Sora's friends split their Find him with Terra, Agua, and Ventus looking for Sora in the realm of darkness, donning their Keyblade armors as they depart. Ventus has his Keyblade Armor along with Agua's approach to Terra at a pedestrian crossing with Keyblade Graveyard and grabs the road to Dawn before the trio notices an unknown figure away. During the birth of sleep, Empty Points And Terra says Soras's name. Ventus sleeps on a bench outside the departure ground before Terra wakes him up, approaching him. They both smile and look up to the sky while pronouncing Sora's name with a sense of renewed hope. The significance of this scene has yet to be revealed, as Terra is trapped inside Terra-Xehanort, Ventus is inside Castle Oblivion and the departure land itself Castle Oblivion. Blank Points Ventus in his Keyblade Armor. According to Tetsuya Nomura, he is about 16 years old. [4] For an unexplained reason, Ventus shows no signs of aging between his memory loss and birth during sleep. Ventus outfit is strikingly similar to Roxas's own Twilight Town clothes. He wears a jacket that resembles a vanishing Roxas jacket (white on the right) and a Sora jacket kingdom hearts II (black on the left), also reminiscent of the Yin and Yang symbol. The collar of the jacket is red and pleated, again, similar to the collar on Rox's own jacket. Underneath it he wears what appears to be a gray vest with a single button and several white, angular patterns on it. He wears a third layer underneath this, like a plain, high neck, black shirt. He also has a chunk of dull green and gray armor on his midsection, which appears to be his vest and another piece of armor on his left shoulder. Ventus pants are also similar to the trousers Roxas wore, although Ventus ballooned outwards slightly before closing about halfway down his legs, similar to caprice pants. These trousers are painted in grey, black and white. He also wears an ornate, dull green and gray piece of armor on his upper left hand, along with a black and white lamented bracelet, which is again strikingly similar to Roxas's, but with white edges instead of Roxas's black-edged bracelet. Like Agua, he wears two criss-crossing straps on his chest, on which he wears a silver Keyblade Master emblem. His boots are guite strange compared to Agua's and Terra's, as they resemble an armored version of normal street shoes in shades of dull green and gray. Touching the piece of armor on the shoulder, Ventus becomes fully clad in armor. In Birth to Sleep, Ventus's suit of armor shares the coloring pieces he usually wears, mostly sporting shades of green and gold. In this suit, Ventus adds a yellow cloak to his outfit, which is discolored, almost appearing rusted. The armor on his knee is gold and covers the sharp, upward pointing hook on the outer side of each The Ventus helmet has a particularly different design from Aqua and Terra's, which appear more squashed and flat at the top. His helmet also has two branches on either side of his head pointing back and angle diagonally upwards. Strangely, Ventus boots are colored entirely gold in this outfit, rather than the multi-colored ones he usually wears. The Birth of The Hearts of Hearts in sleep, Ventus's armor has been changed. He loses his cloak, his boots change to more resemble those in his unarmored position, and the coloring changes much more than Terra or Aqua's. Ventus's armor loses greens completely, now sporting steel blue, gold and black armor, with several red lines decorating it. His name means wind in Latin, much like Sora's name is japanese sky. The official Japanese website refers to Ventus as Swift Wind returns to the bonds (絆巡第疾風, Kizuna Meguru Shippū?). As union leader, Ventus is very friendly, though a little shy, which makes it difficult for him to make friends. He doesn't like the idea of keyblade wielders fighting against each other. After learning about the collapse of his part of Strelitzia, Ventus feels guilty that he was unable to save him when the darkness kept him. Under darkness, he had hidden the desire for power, so Darkness held him into killing Strelitzia. During his apprenticeship with Master Xehanort, Ventus seems to be a very shy boy who doesn't have the particular courage to run Keyblade, leading Xehanort to set up Vanitas. After waking up from a coma caused by Vanita's creation, Ventus becomes much more fragile, getting wrought with suffering only by being talked about. However, when he spends with Aqua and Terra, as well as his amnesia, makes him change. On this day, Ventus has many similarities with Sora: he is sweet, cheerful, curious, and gets excited about something new or interesting. As the youngest of the three Keyblade warriors, Ventus is often protected by Terra and Aqua, and thus feels disappointed when they refuse to let him join them on his mission because they don't want him in danger. As a result, Ventus shows the rebellious side when he constantly refuses Aqua suggestions, later orders to return home. When he gives them a go to Disney Town, he grudgingly mentions that Scrooge McDuck told him to take two adults, but he doesn't seem to like his status as the youngest of the three. He also makes new friends easily in different worlds and takes care deeply about Terra and Agua. Ventus is very unable to cope with Terra turning and subsiding to the darkness of his heart. Some of his traitors and personality could be passed on to Sora when his heart joined him. Along with his kind personality, he also shows a lot of courage, especially seen when he fights Vanitas for a time when he promises to fight for his friends no matter what, knowing that he will lose his heart as a result. Although Ventus may come out as innocent and naïve, he has shown that he is not easily fooled, much like Sora. He saw through Pete's charade as Captain Justice with little effort during his trip to Disney Town. Moreover, during his adventure at Olympus, he realized that Phil wasn't really going to train another rookie other than young Hercules. Ventus realized that Hercules and motivation. Ventus's mannerisms have also echoed sora and Roxas; especially when standing around he often places his hands behind his head, in the same position as Sora uses. Another example is the opening of the video; Ventus is seen going through the station dive to the heart as kingdom key and Soul Bear shattering pillars, similar to the Sora and Roxas fall from the shattered station at the beginning of their games. At the beginning of his episode at the departure ground, Ventus fell asleep outside after watching the shooting star, and a little while later, he yawns, and then is surprised to find Aqua standing over him, who giggles at his reaction and teases him affectionately, reflecting how Kairi surprised Sora awake in the original Kingdom of Hearts. Kingdom Hearts III, during his final confrontation with Vantias and due to their separation, Ventus seems to have got a new perspective on darkness and light, believing that it is each individual's choice to decide what they are and not to choose from just one side or the other. When he heard Vantias's choice of their darkness, Ventus did not protest, realizing that his dark colleague's mind was up. Ability to [repair] Ventus using its exclusive Command Style, Fever Pitch. Keyblade and fighting style[edit] The birth of the main characters of Kingdom Hearts in sleep. Ventus is the fastest and neatest, reflecting his ultimate fighting style of dodging, fast motion and guick combo attacks. Ventus has an affinity for wind and light elements and mixes both several of his methods and vicious attacks. Ventus' main fighting style consists of very quick, wide backhanded strikes with his Keyblade's quick succession to deal with the injury. His one strikes are not as powerful as Sora's two-handed strikes or Terra's powerful blows, but his ability to attack quickly accounts for his lower attack power. In addition to his guick standard of attacks, Ventus is available for a variety of exclusive attack teams kingdom Hearts Birth with sleep. Ventus can use its natural affinity for acrobatics to unleash an extended version of the Ars Arcanum-Combo and exhibits advanced Keyblade-throwing capabilities such as Wind Raid, Spark Raid and Treasure Raid. Using its wind affinity, Ventus can use tornado strike to sweep its opponents Another bespoke, final attack, Salvation, allows Ventus to use its luminous affinity to its fullest. Ventus also made heavy use of his wind powers for his personal finishing team, the Air Flair series and his final finisher, Stratosphere. Finally, Ventus has another Finish Command just for him, called Celebration. Magic[edit] Although not as skilled in magic as his classmate, Aqua, Ventus is available in a wide variety of magic spells, as well as two spells only for him kingdom hearts birth with sleep. These two spells are Tornadoes and Faith. The tornado produces a strong gust of wind that absorbs enemies, while Faith creates a powerful burst of light around ventus. Various [edit] Next to the different of these abilities usable by all three or two of the heroes of Kingdom Hearts Birth with sleep. Ventus is available in three unique Command Styles and two exclusive Shotlocks. His first-person Command Style, Fever Pitch, which is gained near the start of the game, allows Ventus to use his guick combat style fully. The second exclusive Command Style, Cyclone, is a powerful Level 2 Command Style that has Ventus using its wind power to attack with wide spinning slashes in all directions. Ventus's third exclusive Command Style is called Wingblade. Activating this second-tier Command Style, Ventus thrown his Keyblade in exchange for six silver white glowing sword lights that float behind him like six glowing wings, reminiscent of a picture of Seraph, a six-wing Angel. Ventus is also available for two unique shotlocks, as well as a third only for storyline purposes. Two free-to-use Shotlocks are Pulse Bomb and Multivortex. The third exclusive shotlock is Dark Link, which can only be used when dimension link with Vanitas in Ventus final battle. Small and spry, Ventus is available in an already well-known Dodge Roll technique as well as an offensive variant named Thunder Roll. In addition, he can use Glide and Superglide capabilities as well as another offensive version called Fire Glide. The reverse team allows Ventus to quickly evade enemies in attack and rush behind it, similar to the reactions Command Kingdom Hearts II uses against the Twilight Nobodies. D-Link[edit] Main article: Game: Ventus (D-Link) Ventus becomes D-Link for Terra and Agua after they get Agua handmade Wayfinders. When in a link with Ventus, the user can use fast and fast commands that reflect Ventus' speed-oriented fighting style.

Weapons[edit] Ventus's Keyblades mostly balanced in terms of attack and magical power. His versions of common Keyblades have a shorter length compared to Terra and Aqua's; it helps him better wield them in his signature backhand style. In the era of fairy tales Ventus uses Keyblade Missing Ache in its third form. By the time he became a master of Xehanort's discipleship was using the Wayward Wind. Ventus has three exclusive Keyblades; his default Keyblade, Wayward Wind, along with Frolic Flame and Lost Memory. Frolic Flame wins after Ventus meets Lea and Isa, and Lost Memory is received when Ventus remembers his past on Destiny Island. Notes and references ^ Kingdom Hearts Birth by Sleep Ultimania, p. 617; Interviewer: Why is Roxas dual-wield? / Tetsuya Nomura: Sora can wield two keyblades at once because he has Ventus's as well as his own. As Roxas is part of Sora, he also can use two. In days, Roxas awakened his ability to dual wield after the battle of Xion. In KHII, when Sora absorbs him, he can also be dual-wield.
