If you are a new graduate or career changer, you may be their best bet to learn your way out of this recession. But be careful that a niche degree doesn't amount to a useless degree, says Tory Hoen, co-author of the upcoming issue of the Gradspot.com Guide to Life After College. Cool-and-useful courses of study abound – it's all about finding them. Have you lived in your textbooks and pajamas in college? Library sciences are underestimated and can lead to cool careers, hoen says. Other surprisingly useful masters' include NYU's dual studies in economics and film production and columbia's journalism, and fill in the blank degrees that link communication with a professional staple is necessary, but think again: being able to summon quick and concise creativity is invaluable in most industries. It's really true that business intelligence is a long, long way away, says Andy Speer, VP of Technology Solutions at Technisource. Getting your next degree can also be a way to do the time abroad that you never do in college – and turn it into a career asset. France has of the world's most prestigious business schools in HEC and INSEAD, and few companies would pursue a degree in international relations or public policy from Sciences Po in Paris or the London School of Economics. But further training does not have to be extravagant. Many companies, especially in technology, are known to hire self-taught talent. Sometimes it's so simple, simple, new specialty that you want to track and buy a few books on Amazon. For computer engineers, Speer says, process and automation skills are really hot, and it's probably the easiest ability to train yourself. Need more motivation? Try online certification or local commercial schools. If you can award example assignments during the interview, few employers will care where you picked up your skills. Knowledge of brands and equipment can also help. Telephony and mobile are some of the fastest-developing technologies, both from a hardware and software perspective, Says Speer. The more experience you have with these vendors and products of these manufacturers, the more valuable you become. One of the biggest expenses for many middle-class families is the cost of schools are of poor quality. A 2014 comparison by the real estate site Trulia found that in postcodes with the highest rated public schools, only 4% of children. attend private schools, compared to 19% of children in postcodes with poorly rated public schools. But that doesn't mean that parents who live in good school districts typically cost much more than other homes in the same area - about 32% more. For many families, the extra cost of housing therefore adds up to more than what they would have paid for a private school. This means that parents who want the best possible education for their children have a difficult choice: to pay directly for private school or indirectly to pay for a house near a good public school. To find out what's best, they need to know how these two costs compare and what options they have to keep costs down. The cost of private school, according to figures from the National Center for Education Statistics (NCES), about 4.5 million American children were enrolled in private schools between 2011 and 2012. More than 80% of these students were in schools with a kind of religious affiliation. Some 43% attended Catholic schools and another 37% attended schools identified as generally Christian, Jewish or a particular Christian denomination, while 32% are non-religious. On average, the cost of private school tuition for the 2011-2012 school year was USD 10.740 per nceS. This is a considerable burden for a common family. In 2014, the median household income in the United States was .53,657, according to the United States Census Bureau. This means that a family earning the median income would have to spend about 20% of their income in order to place only one child in private and 40% for two children. However, the cost of teaching varies considerably depending on the type of school. The median tuition cost was USD 6,890 per year for Catholic schools. So a family with an average income would pay less than 13% of their income to send a child to a Catholic school, but more than 40% for a non-religious school. The cost of public school is easy to identify - only a fixed number of dollars per year. Calculating the cost of public school is easy to identify - only a fixed number of dollars per year. costs are compared to the cost of living in other nearby neighborhoods. A good starting point is with Niche, a website that evaluates and compares U.S. school districts based on factors such as test-rated students, graduation rates, health and safety ratings. America. For 2016, the Tredyffrin-Easttown School District is the first school district on The Niche. With a focus on Tredyffrin Township, Pennsylvania, a suburb of Philadelphia, this district receives A-plus ratings for academic achievement, teachers, extracurricular activities, and more. According to Trulia, the median sale price for homes in this area is .532,500. This add up to a monthly mortgage payment of about '2,610, based on a 30-year loan, a 20% down payment, and a 4% interest rate. For a buyer who can only afford a 10% deposit, the monthly payment jumps to 3,072 US dollars. In nearby Paoli, on the other hand, Trulia says that the average home price is only '287,000, or USD 1,407 per month. That's a difference of '14,436 per year – about 34% more than the average cost of private schooling for a child. So a family with two or more children would spend less by living in Tredyffrin Township, where the extra money for housing would cover the cost of schooling for all their children. A 2014 article about school costs in Money comes to a similar conclusion. It compares the cost of private and public school for two fictional families living in eastern Massachusetts: A family spends '2,120 a month on a house at a Prize in the village of Auburndale, which has some of the best public schools in the country; the other spends '998 per month on a house in a neighborhood with average schools, plus an average of USD 782 per month for private school family will be able to move forward by 340 dollars per month. However, the math changes completely when both families have two children. In this case, Family saves a total of 70,000 US dollars over the course of the two children's school years. Keeping school costs under control Generally, it seems that public schools – even in expensive neighborhoods – are a better deal for families with multiple children, while private schools tend to be a better value only for children. However, this rule does not apply to everyone. Parents who choose the right private school can reduce tuition costs to an affordable level, even if several children are in school district an affordable choice, even with just one child. Private School Options One way to make private school more affordable is to choose a school with lower tuition. As mentioned earlier, religious schools - especially Catholic ones - tend to be much more affordable than non-sectarian private schools. Based on NCES figures, a family could send two children to a Catholic school for an average of USD 13,780 per year. That's a bit less than the extra USD 14,436 per year that it costs to live in Tredyffrin Township instead of Paoli. Another private school is a Montessori school. These schools take a pedagogical approach that focuses on letting children, but some extend to early adolescence. According to a 2009 survey by the North American Montessori Teachers' Association, the cost of a year at Montessori school fluctuates sharply, but the median price for elementary school students is about .600 dollars. This makes Montessori schools more expensive than the typical Catholic school, but on a par with other religious schools. Parents can also save money by starting their children in a public primary school and then taking them to a private high school. According to the Money article, if their hypothetical private school family in the expensive school district. Private school scholarships Families who have difficulty affording private schooling can sometimes bring it into their financial reach through scholarships and other forms of financial support. Some schools have their own financial assistance programs, others participate in national, regional or government scholarship Fund, Children's Scholarship Fund (CSF) now offers partial scholarships for low-income families Scholarships cover up to 75% of tuition costs, with the average amount being USD 1,700 per child. They can be used for any type of school – religious, secular or even home. In order to qualify for scholarships, qualify, Meet a child in elementary school and meet the income guidelines for the National School Lunch Program. In 2015-2016, the fund awarded scholarships to more than 24,000 students. To apply for a scholarships to more than 24,000 students. To apply for a scholarships to more than 24,000 students. run by the Jack Kent Cooke Foundation, offers scholarships for middle and high school students with first-class grades. Every year, around 60 students receive academic advice, access to special enrichment programs, and other resources. Families with incomes of up to USD 95,000 can apply, but most Young Scholars come from families with an income of less than USD 60,000. The application period runs from January to April, and students know until September whether they have gualified for an allowance. A better chance. This program is aimed at students of color in grades 4-9 who receive good overall grades and are active in extracurricular activities. The program does not actually provide schols nationwide – both religious and secular – and helps them apply for financial support from those schools. A better chance says that most students who apply through their program receive financial support, but there is no specific percentage. The application process begins in February for the school youcher programs operating in certain states or regions of the country. Parents can find out about programs in their area via the private school website. A house near the best public schools in the country's 20 largest cities that combine good schools with affordable housing prices. For each neighborhood, the site lists the average home price and school district rating on a 100-point scale, based on factors such as class size and health test scores. For the 10 largest metro areas in the U.S., the top neighborhoods are: Metro Area Neighborhood Median House Value Public School Rating New York, NY Queens, NY 234,924 92 Los Angeles, CA Alamitos, CA 411.225 87 US-Dollar Chicago, IL Elmhurst, IL 260.105 86 US-Dollar Dallas, TX Richardson, TX 259.597 90 Philadelphia, PA Narberth, PA 274.086 96 Houston, TX Friendswood, TX 218.832 Washington 94 , DC Laurel, MD 279.307 88 € Miami, FL Hallandale Hallandale FL 184.819 52 Atlanta, GA Fayetteville, GA 202.980 65 Boston, MA Brookline, MA 390.447 98 If the area you live in - or where you want to live - is not part of a large metropolitan area, Neighborhood Scout can still help you find an affordable area with good schools. You can enter your state and region into the site's advanced search engine, and then select your criteria for school guality, price, and other features that are important to you, such as crime rates or walkability. However, to use this feature, or USD 192 per year. Another way to afford a home in a first-class school district is to consciously choose to live in a smaller home. In Tredyffrin Township, PA, for example, Zillow lists three-bedroom apartments for as little as USD 390,000. The mortgage payment for a house like this would be about '1,912 per month, or USD 8,376 per year compared to the average house price. Final word When choosing a place of residence, the school district is not the only factor to consider. For starters, you want to find a house near your workplace, so you don't have to face a long commute every day - possibly even one close to friends and family. Finally, you want to live in a neighborhood that's comfortable for you, with access to all the amenities you care about, from local businesses to a good public library. So if the neighborhood you like best isn't the one with the best schools, don't give it up. Instead, crunch some numbers and see how much you could save by combining an affordable home with a private school. Or, on the other hand, if the place you're in love with has a great school district and sky-high housing prices, look for ways to find an affordable home in that neighborhood. Have you attended a public school or a private school? What would you choose for your children? Children?
