No matter how well designed and informative your presentation is, it's hard to hold viewers' attention. Adding interesting items, such as including a video in Google segments, can make slides more interesting and interactive and engage your audience in focusing on your message. Why a video? Some of the many benefits of including video in a presentation of Google segments include: easy to do if you have access to internet connectionVideo can provoke emotional reactions and motivate audiences to change paceMakes make easier by giving you a short break while the video plays, especially with longer video selection performances appropriate not just randomly selecting video and stick on a slide. Select a video that is: ProfessionalRelevant to the content of your presentation and adds a value that wasn't too long (it should be between 30 and 60 seconds) and doesn't overdo it. If you have lots of videos or other multimedia effects, you'll distract your message and lose the attention-grabbing effect. Now that you've learned why and how videos can help your presentation, let's show you several ways to include a video on the Google slide. Include YouTube video in Google segments where Google owns and integrates with YouTube, you can add a video without leaving the slide surface. Start by going to the slide you want to add the video in. From navigating the top bar, click insert > video. In the pop-up that opens, you'll see three options: if you don't have a particular video in mind, type a relevant keyword in the search window and hit back to find a video you want to use. View the results from the search window by clicking on the video play button. When you find someone you like, click Select to insert it into the slide. Move the video by clicking on it and drag it to a logical place and looks good on the slide. Change its size by grabbing one of the four angles around the video to keep the aspect ratio. Include a Video URL by YouTube if you know which YouTube video you want to use, select the URL option when inserting a video. Paste the video URL to YouTube in the box and then click Select. Include Google Drive videos in Google segments that some businesses block access to the Web to YouTube. So, what can you do if you don't have access to YouTube? Luckily, you can stream from Google Drive and still include a video on one or multiple slides. If you have a video on Google Drive, it's easy to add to a slide. Click insert > video. Select the Google Drive option. You'll see, of videos on your drive. Click on the one you want to use and then click Select to include it. If the video is on your computer, you can download it to your drive and then use it. To download a video to Google Drive, go to the drive and click download a new file > in the top left corner. You must sign in to your Google Account. Make sure it's the same account where you create slides. Locate the video file on your computer and double-click it. If you have a lot of data on Drive, you may have to update the page. The video will take a few seconds to process the video. When you're done, you'll see the video thumbnail. Go back to the slide you want to add the video to, click Insert > Video and choose Google Drive. The video you uploaded to the drive will be one of the options you can select. Click on the video and click Select to insert it into the slide. Resize and move it even where you want it. Setting your video to autoplay when you make a presentation in front of the audience, setting up your built-in videos to autoplay will make the experience smoother. This simple process works on videos added from a YouTube search, by URL, and from Google Drive. Click on the video on your slide and then on the format options above the video. From the panel that opens on the right side of the slide, click on the carrot next to play the video and then mark the auto-shutdown when you submit. When you go to a slide with built-in video, it will play automatically without having to click any buttons. How to cut and edit a built-in video never by selecting the video you want to edit. This will open the same side panel that you saw when setting up the video on autoplay. You can set the start and end time of the video. If the video is long, you will need to trim it by adjusting the times accordingly. Other settings include: Mute position editing to resize the aspect ratio to keep video attributes positioning video the ability to trim video is a useful feature. It is especially useful if you just want to view a short clip of the longest video. Keep in mind that you can also change size and position by clicking on the video, grabbing an angle to change its size, and dragging it around the slide to reposition it. The last edit option lets you add a hometown shadow to the video. Pick: ColorTransparencyleiStance Radius will be ready for your presentation exercise before handing it over to a live audience. Learn in advance about the slides on which you included videos and make sure they make sense in the context of your message. Make sure the location you're going to be on has a broadband connection and bandwidth enough to handle videos. Add some pizzazz to your presentation by including videos in Google chipbacks for a smoother experience. SearchClear searchClose searchGoogle appsMain menu document editors when used effectively, Google Slides is an incredibly useful and free tool for creating a touching and attractive slideshow. If you're in the middle of a slideshow mode and looking for a way to get your audience's attention, consider adding videos to your presentation! A short and convenient video can interrupt your presentation while also emphasizing the key points of your message. The thing to remember here, though, is that short and to the point is better; A short and convenient video can interrupt your presentation while also emphasizing the key points of your message. Twitter this quote choosing the right video to integrate into your slideshow is important, but that is to make sure that the clip actually works when it comes time to present your presentation. After all, there is nothing more embarrassing than falling into a technology glitch in the middle of your conversation. Fortunately, it makes Google chips quick and easy not only to include videos in slides, but to edit them as needed. Not sure where to start? We've got you covered with some ways below. How to include video in Google segments there are three main options for including video in Google segments. You can add a video directly from YouTube, from your Google Drive account, or from an external source. From YouTube via search the fact that Google owns YouTube since 2006 means that many of its products can be easily integrated with YouTube. In fact, you don't even need to leave the google page surface to include YouTube video — this is probably the fastest and easiest way to add video to your slideshow. Start with the slide you want to include in the video, choose insert from the menu bar and click on a video from there, and you'll be asked for a suitable YouTube search bar. Type keywords for the type of video you're looking for and click the search icon to view instant search results. Select the video you want to include, and it will appear on the slide. With the format options on the left side, you can choose the part of the video that you want to view by default, the entire video will be included — but remember that most people don't want to sit in a full five-minute video in the middle of your presentation. With that in mind, you might want to select a brief, catchy and appropriate section of the video to share with your audience. Set the clip to autoplay or mute when you submit it, you'll also see the AutoPlay checkbox when you submit which you can select if you want to play your video once you access that particular segment. Otherwise, you'll need to manually The video play button to start. If you don't want to replay the audio, mute the built-in video. Putting the video accurately using the axes here is how this method looks. By direct link if you already have the URL for the specific YouTube video you want to use, you can also switch to the tab by URL and paste the link directly. To move the video around the slide, you also have the option to pull n-drop exactly where you want. You can also use switches around the video itself to change its size as needed. You can't crop the built-in video, so you'll need to think about the entire slide layout to integrate the video well. After you are completely satisfied with the size of the YouTube video and its location and length, just enter the Enter key and it will be everything. If you need to make any additional changes to the video later, all you have to do is click on it to start editing again. You can't crop the built-in video, so you'll need to think about the entire slide layout to integrate the video well. From Google Drive, there's another option to include video in a Google Slide Presentation through Google Drive. This may be perfect if you have a video that has already been saved on your computer or device, but you don't necessarily want to upload it to YouTube. Including videos directly from Google Drive is useful if you already have videos uploaded to your Drive account. If the video isn't already on Google Drive, follow a few simple steps to download it. From there, click the insert from the menu bar at the top of the screen and select a video. At the top of the box that appears, you'll see three tabs: search by URL, and Google Drive. Click on the Google Drive tab and you'll instantly see thumbnails of all the videos shown by Google Drive. Click on the video you want to add to your slide and click Select. The video will then be added to the slide, and you can resize, reposition, and cut it using the same steps shown in a YouTube section above. It's really that simple! From other platforms, what if you have a video from a platform other than YouTube or Google Drive that you want to include in the slideshow? Ideally, if there's a way to download this video to YouTube or Google Drive, that's the best way for you to do it. If you don't have this option, though, you can still integrate external video into your slideshow with a little work. Instead of including the video directly in your slideshow, what you're going to do is add a direct link to the video that you can click on during your presentation. To beautify things and make the slide more visually appealing, we recommend connecting the URL to a screenshot of the video itself. That way, you click on The image during the presentation instead of a random link. To beautify things and make the slide more visually appealing, we recommend connecting the URL to a screenshot of the video itself. Let's say you have a video landing page created using Wave.video and want to view that video during your presentation. To do this, you'll need to start by finding an attractive moment from the video and taking a screenshot of it. Be sure to cut the screenshot so that you look at only a screenshot of the video itself - not your desktop or entire browser. Once you've saved the screenshot to your computer, go back to the Google Slide window and click the Insert tab and select a picture. Find, select, and add a screenshot file on your computer. From there, you can adjust the size and positioning of the screenshot as needed. Once you are happy with its size and positioning, click on the image and go back to the insert tab. Select a link option, paste the video URL, and click on an app. From there, clicking on the screenshot image from inside your slide should open the direct link to your video. However, keep in mind that you won't have the option to cut or otherwise edit the video when using this option. This means that if you have a particular segment that you want to show to your audience, you may want to find it manually. The Bottom Line, as you can see, learn how to include videos in Google segments is very simple. Once you do this a few times, the inclusion of future videos becomes second nature. As a reminder, it's always best to check videos (and even trilogies) to make sure they work before your presentation. This is particularly important if you will submit from a different computer than the one you create a slideshow on. From there, you can make any last-minute adjustments you may need and move on to your presentation with a little extra confidence.
