Pete the cat groovy buttons craft

Back to school I always smile because I walk down the school hallway and Pete sees the cat smiling at me! I love the silly Pete the Cat stories and my son's favorite story is Pete the Cat and His Four Groovy Buttons. This button paper plate craft is an easy one for children of all ages to make and can go with other stories and themes (such as Corduroy or even Lalaloopsy themes) – not just Pete the cat. Groovy Button Paper Plate Craft Materials: Small paper plates yellow, orange and blue craft color (or markers/colored pencils) foam color brush hole punch or a large pen scissors Old newspapers Pete the cat and its four Groovy buttons is one of our favorite books, so we had to choose it for this month Virtual Book Club for kids. The funny and colorful story of Eric Litwin is loved by preschoolers everywhere for a reason – it's just cool! The groovy, repetitive text and Pete's great attitude to life make it a story your children want to read over and over again. Then, when you're done reading you can sit down and make a four Groovy button bracelet! Pete the Cat and his four Groovy Buttons Book Craft Pipe Cleaner, Yarn, Elastic Thread 4 large buttons color (if necessary) We have a large bag of buttons in our craft supplies that we raided for this project. My preschooler decided to use a yellow instead of two blues and since it's her groovy button bracelet, that's what we went with. You can let your children decide what color they want their buttons and paint them if needed. Some of our buttonholes were tiny, so my preschooler found it easiest to use a pipe cleaner to thread the buttons, but yarn or string would also work. Especially if you have a children's safe needle. Turn the ends of the pipe cleaner together and wear your groovy button bracelet! The activity: Beginning Sound Button CoverMaterials Needed: freely printable game boards (see link below) and foam circles or real buttonsJust print the freely printable game boards. There are enough boards for four individual players or they can play in teams if you have more players. Each player also needs some groovy buttons to cover up the spots on the board. Specify how the round can be won. You could say it's a cover in case every point on the board needs to be covered to win. Or it could be a red round. You need to cover all the red spots to win. To play, the announcer calls a word. Each player identifies the initial tone of the word and then searches for the corresponding letter on their board. The first player to cover his board properly wins! It's a simple fun Pete the Cat activity to identify beginning sounds.
