Tuesday, March 24, 2020 Today marks the end of the personal era. I started playing War Dragons on April 20, 2015 on my iPhone 5. My phone could run so hot we had to play with ice packs because of how much time we spent in the game and how much some phones couldn't handle it. At this stage of the game, there were no tools to help the players, and there was definitely no country growing paths. My history with breeding tracks began this time as we experimented and tracked the best plan (so we thought) our team of wiki's. Eventually, a self-impaired player dread named Amoeba released the first accurate and comprehensive breeding website for the game. Through this, I updated my team paths and eventually started helping those who aren't my team too. Somehow we went from there to this massive spreadsheet that we have now. I've spent years going over these, and although I'm by no means perfect, it worked, alright. Today is the end of my career at War Dragons. I could list my reasons why, and I could say a lot of heartfelt good byes. I have made some sincere friends about this game over the years and grew into a person. Now, however, it is time to go. I miss a small handful of people, but I can honestly say I'm lucky to finally be out for free. For you, dear reader, I ask one thing - keep my time spent on these roads. Please don't have or use it in a way that is not intended. I'll use the links to embed this game, you have a link to share with your team differently (bit.ly/RedsBreedingPaths), and the paths to the endgame have no reason to change. Leave them to be, and leave my job to be out of respect for the time I have given to the community. Tools are given pg to help them maintain the integrity of breeding decks and even automatically create breeding paths (if everything is done to plan). Someone else is already available to edit my breeding paths and you'll see an edit where PG follows out the levels of plans moving forward. Again, please just show some respect for my time and small heritage in this game. Finally I say to you a good bye. Fly high, dragon gentlemen.
