1234567891011121314 Paradise Valley, Arizona, United States Tucson, Arizona, United States Rimrock, Arizona, United States Scottsdale, Arizona, United States Clifton United States, Arizona, United States Scottsdale, Arizona, United States Paradise Valley, Arizona, United States Valley, Arizona, Unit jumped into the exotic far, few realize that a desert oasis awaits right at their fingertips. Sedona's rugged terrain, spiritually soothing and romantic backdrop begging for a romantic stay to unwind from all the stresses of wedding planning; and a large number of upscale resorts and creative cuisine options ensure the most luxurious and decadent escape. From adrenaline-fuelled 4x4 tours to spa day rejuvenation and easy wine tasting tours, this southwestern gem has everything a post-nuptial holiday needs. If that sounds like the honeymoon retreat you and your future partner are dreaming of, here's a breakdown of the perfect mini-month options for your memorable desert chase. El Portal Sedona Hotel is located in the heart of Sedona, adjacent to Tlaquepaque Arts & amp; The famous Shopping Village. The hotel offers 12 unique suites that include natural building materials and features such as an adobe corner fireplace with river stone, French doors, arched windows and hand-painted details. The Governor's Suite is a honeymoon favorite, with views of the second-floor Red Rock and vaulted beamed ceilings. Or consider a more secluded stay at Enchantment Resort. Set on 70 acres in Boynton Canyon, the beautiful landscape and views of Red Rock are hard to beat. Tee off at the Seven Canyons golf course, treat yourself to a signature stone massage at the famous Mii Amo spa; or spend the day enjoying the views and sun at Enchantment Resort's heated pool. No matter what activity you choose to fill the day, cover it with the famous prickly pear margarita on the 180 View homepage. Skip breakfast at your hotel and head north to Indian Gardens Cafe & amp; amp; Market in beautiful Oak Creek Canyon. This historic establishment was built in 1947 to meet the growing needs of the community. It has served as a general store, gas station, bar, ice cream parlour, antique shop, and sandwich shop, just to name a few. Southwestern breakfast options include breakfast burritos, chorizo and egg tacos, and Chilaguiles — two fried eggs on tortilla chips, processed with traditional red chile enchilada sauce, melted cheese, avocado, lime-cilantro cream. Then, treat the treat for an exclusive dining experience at L'Auberge de Sedona's Cress on Oak Creek. An outdoor terrace located along the edge of babbling Oak Creek will leave you breathless. The dinner menu serves seasonal dishes made from locally sourced and thoughtfully selected ingredients. This rare and refined dining experience is an experience you will never forget. There is no shortage of adventure activities in Sedona, but the Pink Adventure Tour is a must for everyone. See the area's famous Red Rock, Chicken Point and Mushroom Rock on this thrilling 4x4 off-road ride in a pink Jeep Wrangler. Simplify with a two-hour Broken Arrow Tour or book a full day with the Jeep and Horseback Ride Combo Tour. For a key-down adventure, treat yourself to a day of Arizona wine tasting and history on the Verde Valley Wine Trail. Choose from a number of wineries and tasting rooms as you drive through the countryside and gorges surrounding the towns of Sedona, Cottonwood, Clarkdale, Cornville and Jerome. In addition to wine, Cottonwood is home to the Desert Diamond Distillery and THAT Brewery. Be sure to choose your designated driver, or book door-to-door transportation through Sedona Wine Adventures. Your mini moon is not complete without a shopping trip to Tlaguepague Arts & amp; amp; Shopping Village—the art and soul of Sedona. You'll find everything here, from Native American art to handmade jewelry and Southwestern home décor. Anita Scheelings There's a magical spot tucked inside Arizona's Prescott National Forest, where the sun shines more than 300 days from this year, koyotes lure you to sleep, and sheep, horses and peacocks roam endless blooming fields. Anita Scheelings Welcome to Skull Valley Lavender Farm—a 3.5-acre private retreat that also harvests hops, fruit, figs, wool, eggs, honey and berries that happen to be looking for the next owner. We can think of a million reasons why it should be you, but we'll start with a few: property taxes under $350/year, endless public land for horseback riding, and not even get us started at Arizona sunset. Anita Scheelings Anita Scheelings Located on a former farm, the property is chewed into the national forest (and that means the pastoral environment is here to stay). The current owners live on the premises — and you can, too, in a simple modular two-bedroom house that acts as the ultimate farmhouse. Alternatively, choose a quirkier dig inside the cabin of the 1895 cow camp, which currently serves as a lavender dryer station but can be easily converted into a residence. Anita Scheelings Finally maybe it's time to kiss the booth goodbye. Anita Scheelings Skull Valley Farm is currently on the market for $349,000. For more information, visit the agriculture website. Yes, we know this family of four (well, five if you count Comets) is imaginary, but we can't help but notice how much they would adore this house located in Scottsdale, Arizona, designed by Bing Hu in 1998. From the outside, the house looks like it's made of cinder beams and steel. The inside, on the other hand, is a 10,000-square-foot pure modern wonder - from black tiled floors to metal ceiling panels. Even the kitchen has all the latest technology, including a stunning outdoor telescope door. The only thing Jetson won't recognize is the surrounding desert landscape. And while it's not ideal for some, with floor-to-ceiling windows, an incredible negative edge round pool, and plenty of steel, it's safe to say, this house is cool all year round. Interested? The house is on the market for $3.488 million. But if we're honest, we're not sure George's job at Spacely Space Sprockets can afford an expensive house. Bad news for him, good news for us.
