This book has the interesting explanation of Robert von Rancke Graves' (spoiler view)[son of Leopold von Rancke next to his mother (hide spoiler)] official schooling as perverse, a form of espalier that prevents it from developing freely, instead giving it a series of difficulties that it must overcome later. Although robert graves was originally a military officer in the west during World War II, there are many more here, war poets, English sastera scenes (see spoilers) [I really like] his meeting with Thomas Hardy (spoiler view)[Hardy tells how he was cutting the subject one day and had a good idea for the story but didn't have pencils and papers with him, continue to trim the subject, but once he is finished Also he actually accepts the wife of Kubur keeping his eldest name, remembering a girl in his hometown who has done the same thing - one of the seconds when one realizes the possibility of tradition and custom resam (hiding spoilers)], Kubur also meets Masefield, Galsworthy, Arnold Bennett, T.S. Elliot, Wilfred Owen (hide spoilers)] feminism, socialism, war trauma Egypt. Above all hints of Britain as light weight, lacking in graviti, earnestness, and moral seriousness, their place is otherwise taken by snobbish traditions and uninjured customs. For this Tomb finally says Goodbye, however one cannot take a vacation from one another easily because one can resettle in Majorcia: And if condemned to revive those lost years, I may have to behave again in the same way; a message in the Protestant morals of the English administrative class. although qualified by mixed blood, the nature of rebellion, and poetic obsessions that befall, it is not easily sided. (p.282) During the second world war he refused to before the draft board as he was only offered a class travel warrant, insisting as captain retired on his right for a First Class trip and not having to sit shoulder with the likes of village policemen, where one wonders little about the socialism quality of the Grave profession even as a note of how he could not escape who studied snobbishness years earlier. Then in between poetry and me, Claudius and so on, she wrote the white Goddess, and in my innocence, I had imagined that was part of her reaction to school in the trenches and at Charterhouse, and marija Gimbutas's style created in the happy mythical prehistory of an age-centered, cheerful and thoughtful woman, however I found it on the site: P, and get magic from the moon, not from the sun. No poet can hope to understand the nature of the poetry unless he has a vision of King Naked crunched into the cut oak, and watch the dance, their bodies bend uncoutly forward, with the monotony chant Killing! Kill! Kill! and Blood! Blood! Blood! That rather suggested that he created for himself not to escape his experience but justification - war as crucifixion, indeed as in the Anglo-Saxon Dream Christ Rood stepping into the cross is an act of heroic hero, a hero, beowulf, sacrifice of war as the end he mentions in passing that he has read Nietzsche in the trenches and I wonder if he feels that the test of war is a supergeman, certainly in this account of the French public, liverpool shipping magnates (see spoiler)[which even the U-Boot campaign and the rations keep their golf clubhouse well filled with meat (hide spoilers)], politicians are all under insult (spoiler view)[Lloyd George has the eye of a sleeping killer, for all his enthusiasm and convictions (hide spoilers)], he would happily shoot them as he told Bertrand Russell that he imagined his soldiers would be happy to shoot attractive munition workers if given the opportunity, he is unlikely so far from the mainstream of European Fascism, the war is wrong but terrorism, or rather one's willingness to do someone's duties and stances by someone's friends or soldiers under your charges, while under fire is the only virtue. Still from the eyes of Graves we see the war as a strange and horrific self instilled chewing through people or human ammunition as a mother describes a son in a popular answer published to the soldier's demands for peace > spoiler > War and blood Here we see in his account that schools and wars are parallel experiences, it's not a victory that but playing with the right passion and attitude. Both schools and wars both sparked from the same cultural soup, the arcade tradition of school dress codes mirrored by the military (see spoiler) [pp72-79 snobbery regimen. (hide the spoile Sassoon aspire to be (see spoiler) perhaps a number of Edwardian England's erotic homo goes to this idol of the leading working-class man into the battle (see spoiler) Graves even disappointed in the Sweetheart 'Dick' which suggested the Canadian Corporal, lifted in front of a magistrate who arrested him for caring for anthropologist William Rivers - who also treated Siegfried Sassoon and Wilfred Owen (hide spoilers)] (hide spoilers)]. From the point of view of this system is all disturbing, since it is a circle of stupidity that offers no possibility of escape, War is like a school, one enters as a first year and must simply survive, to escape it is cowardly, to change it impossible from its perspective, the only thing to do is revelation in snobbish Protestness: Listing men in the order of hygiene and fighting joy - not surprisingly English and German considered the cleanest and best soldiers, France and the dirtiest and least soldiers. Irish and Scottish Catholics were too unusual, and were therefore responsible for getting themselves shot when doing something stupid. While Graves felt Catholic would follow their priests into a 'jungle' under fire and hold their positions even if they rejected their usual officer orders. Although colleagues pointed out that he felt the Anglican sermon of chaplain on the tie was wonderfully disturbing before the men were ordered into action in Iraq.I was struck by how the Graves account cold, it burned like ice, this was even effective, I noticed that when he got to 1916 I felt nauseous enough while reading, and arms, Graves suffered from frequent war dreams until 19, war in Ireland and demobilization followed by Patriarchy idiocies and parochialism in public life. Majorca is the only option really, therefore 'Goodbye to all that'. Insane warfare from a corner Graves, an attitude at home over crazy he traces the chinese bisik effects of stories about church bells running to announce the fall of Antwerp to Belgian priests heroes used as human bell clams in five and on a German citizen trainee - The Times makes light of a report of forty unveilants accompanied by fifty police with carbohydrates from London to Lancashire, Graves reported true because he was the officers who took their custody - to ensure that potentially troops were equally matched, the pollutants were also in the hands-on cuffs, police managed to break two windows The gas mask business is in some typical way, with the British using gas weapons before they have an effective gas mask he recounts all kinds of gas masks removed with, one by one slightly shortage in some way from the previous model. As aside Egypt and Feminism she visited the Greek family home, one of the daughters told her that in another twenty years The Egyptian woman would control everything. The feminist movement has just begun and since women are the most active and intelligent part of the population, major changes may be expected. Nor will his siblings stand his father's attempts to keep them in their place (p.270) however some previous pages he has been warned by lawrence of Arabia's The Egyptia.. you don't have to stay in between. Surely it would be a miracle if an Englishman could recognize them. The bureaucrat society is exclusive, and living smiling is unaware of the people (p.264) apparently so far that in a clash between bureaucrats and women for Egyptian control that bureaucrats continue to win. None had a big deal with the first world war but gave an idea of just how wide the Graves memoir was. ... More... More
