They were so worried that the dishwasher could stick to 12 perfect mumble settings that were designed only for the posture of plates - not everyday pots and pans. The slots for inserting discs are so close together and italicized that you can't set anything in them other than the panels. I've straightened all the little horses straight up and down, and now the plates lean forward. I used to run a machine for us a couple of times a week. Now I have to run it every night because I can't fit anything into it. Energy efficient? Product or service Mentioned. I totally agree with you. Even though I have Silence Plus 50. I spent extra money on the dishwasher once, and now I regret it. I understand that all the things are in the pots and pans. But that's more than that. The dishwasher must be able to hold more than the dishes and glasses. Even smaller glass or metal pans, small corn, larger bowls. Bosch Dishwasher Silence Plus 50 Dba User Manual Pdf Different items that you use on a daily basis do not fit. yes, it's all too short. I've had a lot of dishwashers in my life and I've never had this problem before. It's my fault I wasn't paying more attention. But he didn't recommend it to anyone. Very bad design. Occasionally I put in my pots, even on the top rack and come clean. I don't give my pans, which are not chopsticks, because while the dishwasher is supposed to be safe, they eventually lose their target. You have to be creative in the folding. My only complaint is that the clean alarm is so loud that it wakes me up when I run it at night. Why do I need an alarm that tells me it's over? I can see a red light on the floor if it's still running. What a  man has come up with the idea to design a dishwasher that is practically silent with a loud alarm that doesn't stop until you get up and open the door????????? If the dishwasher is in the process of washing or washing, avoid burns in high temperature water. open the door just in time to brake the machine before running. Rest slightly, about 10 seconds - until the water noises stop - before opening the door enough to work the keys. Our Bosch dishwasher model number SHE68T55UC/02 was the worst dishwasher we've ever had. The print on the front panel was confused shortly after we bought it, and Bosch refused to change the plate. We got $100 to get the job done! In addition, in the model we owned, it was necessary to replace the safety recall, which requires electrical cables. There was also a very toxic smell when you opened the dishwasher after the cycle, the dishes were not clean and the water was sitting in the drain area at the bottom of the dishwasher. The water in our glasses was so toxic, we had to wash them manually. Bosch's customer service was the worst. We spent countless hours on the phone getting answers to our problems. They sent two representatives, but they had no sense of smell, and both dismissed our concerns as relentless. These two visits required a break from work and hours of late time. We're never going to buy the Bosch Dishwasher again. We love our KitchenAid dishwasher and highly recommend them. I'm anonymous that I have a Bosch dishwasher for about 8 months. It all started well, and today it's throwing a terrible code E-28. I cleaned the drain as much as I could without coming to the ground and opening things. wash. Washed. But hold out some hope. I still have a warranty, but that's always 1,000 cubes. In my former home I installed the Frigidaire Gallery (of all) dishwashers made in Italy. Jordan, 100% agrees. I have had excellent experience with Bosch appliances in 20 years of living in Europe. My appliances didn't start to fail until they secured 15 years of service, the dishwasher went first. So when I got back to the U.S., I replaced the Whirlpool dishwasher with Bosch. Not only are they rocking the industry under their main brand, they also represent several other brands, including Siemens, Gaggenau and Neff, which have occasionally acquired them. As for dishwashers, the company has been sporting its SilencePlus line for some time, pushing industrial standards forward, which in turn ended up as a pretty successful move. 50 dBA offered something that competitors did not have within this price point – the Energy Standard A++, the clever way of fitting into the container, the appropriate design of the look that screamed in Germany and finally the full amount of technology built into the device. But, SilencePlus 50 dBA was in no way a complicated device. I mean, here and there you'll probably need to eliminate the dishwasher (hint here is our guide on dishwasher washing cycles), but nothing that a short guide or Bosch dishwasher could fix – in case you still have it.
