Driving in canada in winter

4 tire tips for cold weatherMISSION, KS/ACCESSWIRE/October 22, 2020 / Even the most experienced drivers may encounter challenges when driving on smooth roads caused by ice and snow or coping with the impact of colder temperatures during the winter months. In fact, inclement weather and neglected road conditions are a factor in nearly half a million accidents each winter, according to research by the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety.Being safe on the road begins before it even slides into the driver's seat. When the temperature drops, it is important to pay special attention to the well-being of your vehicle, including battery checking, windshield wipers, coolant and other systems. One of the most important safety and performance features of your vehicle that should not be overlooked as the winter weather sets in your tires, which are the only direct link to the road below. Consider these tips from discount tire experts to help make sure your tires are ready for winter. Keeping the right pressureThe air inside your tires supports the weight of your car, and as the outdoor temperature drops, so does your tire pressure. For each 10-degree drop in room temperature, tires can lose about 1 pound per square inch (PSI) of pressure. Keep a tire pressure meter in your vehicle and check your tires at least once a month to make sure they are filled to the vehicle manufacturer's recommended inflation level, which can be found in the instruction manual or inside the driver's door. Also, if your vehicle has a spare tire, remember to check your inflation level too, as it may be different. Many cars may have been sitting idle because of the pandemic. Activities that are being cancelled, working from home and eating more frequently have kept more cars off the roads than usual. However, just because you haven't been driving doesn't mean your tires have stayed the same. Tyres can still lose air pressure, around 1-2 PSI per month, even if they are not being used. Some tires can also vibrate after sitting down for a while. These concerns can be resolved with a quick review of the tires. Check the depth of the tread helps determine the safe stop distance of a vehicle. You can check the tread depth of your tires by sticking a penny upside down in one of the grooves. If all of President Lincoln's head is visible, it's time to replace the tires to make sure you're able to stop in time on which usually accompany the winter months. Invest in winter tiresEn extreme cold, season-long stomping rubber or summer tires can harden and lose the ability to provide enough traction. Winter tires are made of softer rubber to maintain reliability, and the stomping design features thousands of additional traction edges for added grip. If you drive regularly in temperatures of 45 F - the same temperature at which you can start to see breathing - or below, replacing the four tires with winter tires can help provide more and deliver as much as a 25-50% increase in traction on tires all season, which could be the margin you need to stop in time or turn to avoid problems. Rotate oftenBy increase the life of treading, turn the tires every 6,000 miles, or earlier if irregular or uneven wear develops. An easy way to remember is that your tires rotate every other time you have your oil changed. The duties of public company Tesla are a much bigger factor, but going private is impossible now (sigh), Musk said in response to a tweet saying he should optimize his time in areas such as innovation. Engineering, design and general company operations absorb the vast majority of my mind and are the fundamental limitation to do more. Tesla shares, included in the S& index P 500 this week, have been brought forward eight times this year ahead of the sum to the benchmark measure. The gain is double the advance of the next best player on the indicator. The share price jump also created millionaires among its investors, and boosted Musk's net worth by $132.2 billion to $159.7 billion, making him the second richest person in the world, according to the Bloomberg Billionaires Index.Bloomberg Wealth: The Tesla Investors Who Are Now MillionairesMusk also said that Starlink, SpaceX's space-internet business, would likely be a candidate for its group to go public once its revenue growth becomes reasonably predictable, echoing similar comments from the company's president to investors earlier this year. Space Exploration Technologies Corp has already launched more than 240 satellites to build Starlink, Chairman Gwynne Shotwell said at a private investor event in February. A list would give the the opportunity to buy into one of the most promising operations within the company closely. Right now, we're a private company, but Starlink is the right kind of business that we can move on and go public, he said then. Investors should have up to this point limited ways to own a piece of SpaceX, SpaceX, it has become one of the top-rated company-backed companies in the US, dominating the commercial rocket industry. In addition to a NASA contract for a version of its state-of-the-art Starship spacecraft that can land astronauts on the moon in 2024, SpaceX also has an agreement with a Japanese entrepreneur for a private flight around the Moon in 2023. And it will be ready to launch its first Starship flight to Mars in 2026, Musk said earlier this month. Publisher's note: The top 12 stocks to buy for a whole new year of returns in 2021 was previously released on December 4. It has since been updated to include the most relevant information available.] In July, I recommended seven of the best stocks to buy for 2021 and beyond. As a group, they have done very well in the last three months. For example, Livongo Health was acquired by Teladoc Health (NYSE:TDOC) on October 30 for $11.33 per share in cash and 0.592 times shares in Teladoc. But looking for a bit of a twist in my stock selection process, I have decided that this list will be based on the first letter of the 12 months. This means that my stock selection for January will have a corporate name that starts with J, then an F for February and so on. InvestorPlace - Stock Market News, Stock Advice && amp; Trading Tips 7 Undervalued Stocks That Could Soar in 2021 All 12 will also have a market capitalization of $2 billion or more and positive free cash flow for the past 12 months. By this time next year, I'm sure my choices, in general, won't disappoint. So, without further a lot, here are my top 12 stocks for a new year: Johnson & Johnson (NYSE: JNJ) Fidelity National Information Services (NYSE:FIS) McDonald's (NYSE:MCD) Adobe (NASDAQ:ADBE) MercadoLibre (NASDAQ:MELI) Johnson Controls (NYSE:JCI) Jeld-Wen Holding (NASDAQ:ADBE) MercadoLibre (NASDAQ:MELI) Johnson Controls (NYSE:JCI) Jeld-Wen Holding (NASDAQ:MELI) NYSE:JELD) Apple (NASDAQ:APL) SVB Financial (NASDAQ:SIVB) Otis Worldwide (NYSE:OTIS) NextEra Energy (NYSE:NEE) Dollar General (NYSE:DG) Shares to Buy: Johnson && Johnson (JNJ) Source: Alexander Tolstykh /Shutterstock.com Johnson && Johnson represents the month of January on my list of best stock to buy by 2021. Right now, you're having a sideways year type in the markets. Its total annual return (YTD) until 4 December is only 2.6%. Based on a 12-month free cash flow (FCF) of $18.3 thousand and a current business value (EV) of more than $399 billion, JNJ's FCF performance is a reasonable 4.7%. It may not be value territory – I consider anything above 8% cheap – but it's pretty darn good. How investorplace investorplace Faisal Humayun recently stated, JNJ shares has an excellent product offering. From a business perspective, the company provides diversified exposure to consumer health segments, pharmaceuticals and medical devices, Humayun wrote. The growth of the company's pharmaceutical segment for 2020's T3 was impressive with most therapeutic areas offering a strong number. Not to mention, JNJ is still very much in the Covid-19 vaccine race. This suggests that 2021 could be a break-up year for this Aristocrat Dividend. Fidelity National Information Services (FIS) Source: Maryna Pleshkun/Shutterstock.com Then on my list of the best stocks to buy is Fidelity National Information Services, which represents february. This payment processor is having an overwhelming year relative to U.S. markets as a whole. It lies only a fraction lower than it did this time last year. Based on a 12-month free cash flow of $2.57 billion and a company value of $109.75 billion, however, Fidelity National's FCF performance is very decent at 3.8%. You won't find a lot of feedback from InvestorPlace contributors on this action, even though it plays a role on the technology side of the financial services industry. 7 Growth Stocks You Don't Want to Sleep On However, on November 19, the Florida-based company announced it earned first place for the sixth consecutive year in a ranking of 100 leading providers of venture and compliance technology. Moreover, while the Covid-19 has slowed the pace at which fis can process transactions, it has still managed to generate organic revenue growth during the third quarter of 1% to $3.2 billion. The company also increased adjusted net income by 18% to $887 million. So, this is not a glamorous stock, but its services are certainly in demand. McDonald's (MCD) Source: CHALERMPHON SRISANG/Shutterstock.com To represent March for next year, I chose the golden arches of MCD shares. Like many of the names on this list, McDonald's has a good year going, up from about 7% YTD. This is better than many of his fellow restaurant players, but he is tracking U.S. markets as a whole. Thanks to the Covid-19 closures, McDonald's 12-month free cash flow isn't nearly as strong as it usually is, now at $4.25 billion. The industry leader currently has an FCF yield of 2.7% based on an business value of about $205 billion. Despite operating in one of the worst affected industries, McDonald's has moved beyond the new coronavirus, continually finding ways to transform business without disturbing the main customer. For example, the company recently gave Beyond Meat (NASDAQ:BYND) the cold shoulder announcing that it would be testing a line of meat-free alternatives by 2021, including the McPlant burger. Interestingly — despite developing the plant-based burger with Meat entry - the fast food company decided to go its own way. The decision to go on its own was the result of two reasons. First, MCD didn't want to alienate its meat-loving customers. Second, you're not a fan of letting licensees and other brands into your home. Beyond Meat it would surely have taken some shine from the Golden Arches. McDonald's has had a tough time, but it always bounces back. This makes it one of the best stocks to buy for next year. Adobe (ADBE) Source: r.classen/Shutterstock.com Adobe, the mastermind behind the PDF and more, is my choice for the month of April. It is having an excellent year in the markets right now, with a total YTD return of more than 47%. This is considerably better than both your software peers and the U.S. markets as a whole, which is one of the best stocks to buy right now. Adobe's 12-month free cash flow is $4.9 billion, while its business value is nearly $232 billion for an FCF yield of 2.1%. Both its business value and the multiple EV-EBITDA have also increased dramatically over the past five years. 8 Energy stocks to buy in a changing sector in 2016, the company had an business value of $48 billion and an EV-EBITDA of 26.1. The shares currently have an EV-EBITDA multiple of 48.3. In early February, I said ADBE shares were all but certain to hit $400 by 2020. He did and then some. Moving forward, I think it's all but certain to hit maybe $600 in 2021. MercadoLibre (MELI) Source: rafapress / Shutterstock.com MercadoLibre is sometimes referred to as the Amazon (NASDAQ:AMZN) of Latin America, although it looks more like Alibaba (NYSE:BABA). For my list of the best stocks to buy in 2021, it represents the month of May. Meli shares are currently having a fantastic year in the markets with a total YTD return of almost 200%. Like Adobe, MercadoLibre is faring better than its internet retail peers and U.S. markets as a whole. This company's 12-month free cash flow is $810 million, while its business value is nearly $76 billion for an FCF yield of 1.1%. While this may seem low, MercadoLibre's free cash flow has never been higher. Likewise, their income is on fire and they grow like weeds. True to amazon's comparison, this name will also likely see exponential growth in its free cash flow in the coming years. I've been a fan of the company since as far away as 2013, when I was trading around $120. At the time, I argued that I had a dominant position in trading latin American and its shares would benefit from this. As I write this, the shares are priced around $1,700 and move higher in 2021. Johnson Controls (JCI) Source: Shutterstock There aren't a lot of big companies with a J as the first letter on their behalf. There is even less with strong free cash flow. However, Johnson Controls represents the month of on my list of the best stocks to buy. Interestingly, although it usually only matches the YTD performance of U.S. markets as a whole, JCI shares are doing better in 2020 than it has at some point. Over the past five years, it has delivered a total annualised return for shareholders of around 9.1%, well below the markets. However, up nearly 14% in the past three months, the company appears to be picking up speed by 2021. In early November, Johnson Controls also announced its fourth-quarter results, which were excellent despite the challenging business environment. In 2020, it had sales of $22.3 billion and net income of $1.69 billion, plans a year earlier. 7 Biotech Stocks To Buy Beyond Covid Vaccine Plays This is not bad for a company that manufactures, installs and services products designed for offices, industrial properties and other types of commercial properties, all of which are harmed by the pandemic. Johnson Controls' free cash flow is nearly $1.8 billion, while its business value is about $39 billion for an FCF return of 5.3%. I see JCI as a good stock for risk-averse investors who also like some dividend income - their dividend yield is 2.28% at the moment. Jeld-Wen Holding (JELD) Source: IgorGolovniov/Shutterstock.com By far the smallest of the 12 names on this list, JELD shares have a market cap of $2.42 billion. This window and door manufacturer represents the month of July in my best stock to buy listing. In late January 2017, Jeld-Wen went public at $23 per share. Now, though – if you bought shares in your IPO and are still holding it – you've made almost no money on your investment. Year after year, it has a total return well below the booming returns on its construction products and the team industry peer group. These shares have mostly benefited from the Covid-19. The company's 12-month free cash flow is $250 million, while its business value is $3.8 billion for an FCF yield of 11.3%. However, on November 3, the company reported third-quarter results that were better than analysts' expectations. On the front line, revenue was $1.11 billion, $2 million more than the consensus estimate. In the bottom line, it had adjusted earnings per share of 52 cents, eight cents more than analysts' expectations. The focus of consumers in their homes, coupled with our strategy to deliver profitable market share with customers it is driving increased demand for products in both residential new construction and repair and remodeling channels, said President and Ceo Gary Michel. As the focus remains on homes in 2021, I expect Jeld-Wen to get out of his funk and get it right. Apple (AAPL) Source: WeDesing/Shutterstock.com For August, the famous iPhone maker is the next pick on this list. However, if there was a month starting with letter B, I would recommend Berkshire Berkshire (NYSE:BRK. A, NYSE:BRK. B) because it is a much better value game and happens to own nearly 965 million shares of AAPL shares. Apple's total YTD return is higher than 66%, which sounds fairly ordinary given its total return nearly 30% annualized over the past 15 years. I'd take it every day of the week. As for free cash flow and company value, they are nearly $73.4 billion and $2.1 trillion, respectively. This is an FCF yield of 3.5%, an excellent valuation for one of the largest public companies in the world. In a nuts fault, Apple has become much more than a smartphone maker. 7 Stocks of Electric Vehicles With Style And Substance According to AppleInsider.com, Apple's new M1-equipped Mac mini has jumped to number one in sales in the Japanese market for desktops - after just two weeks of availability. In addition, Apple now has a market share of 27% in Japan, up from about 13% a year earlier. So, I don't think it might go wrong owning Apple in the long haul. Clearly, it is one of the best stocks to buy for next year. SVB Financial (SIVB) Source: Shutterstock.com Next, representing the month of September is my favorite U.S. bank. SVB Financial is the holding company that operates Silicon Valley Bank, the Santa Clara-based financial institution that focuses on entrepreneurs and innovators. Right now, he's having an impressive year compared to peers in regional banking. While SIVB shares are nearly 43% YTD, most of its peers are down. It is also leaving U.S. markets in the dust. That said, I won't bother to point out the free cash flow for that name because it's not meaningful to banks. On the other hand, the balance sheet is more important. SIVB reported 2020 3rd earnings that included earnings per share of $8.47, almost double the $4.42 per share it earned the previous year. We had an exceptional quarter driven by outstanding balance sheet growth, higher revenue from basic fees, strong investment banking revenue, solid credit resulting in a reduction in reserves, and large capital gains related to customer IPO activity, noted chairman and CEO Greg Becker. These results reflect the resilience of our markets and our ability to execute effectively. SIVB was on my 2013 list of the top five stocks to buy for the next 20 years, right up there with Amazon. I think you owe it to yourself to check it out in 2021. Otis Worldwide (OTIS) Source: rafapress/shutterstock.com In early April, this elevator company broke away from United Technologies, which merged with (NYSE:RTX) to become one of the world's largest aerospace and defense companies. Although it will not have a full history of 12 months until April, this representative for the month of October has gone up by 43.5% YTD, suggesting that 2021 could deliver excellent performance. In the past 12 months, Otis has a free cash flow of $1.47 billion business value of about $33 billion. This makes a FCF return of 5.2%, so it is reasonably priced. In addition, the company's third-quarter results show that it holds its own during the pandemic. Frontline organic sales fell 1.2% in 2020 T3 to $3.3 billion, while its operating profit grew 7% on a non-GAAP adjusted basis. In addition, operating margins increased by 120 basis points to 15.4%. 8 Battery Stocks That Electric Vehicle Companies Rely On In November, Toronto-based portfolio manager Christine Poole made OTIS shares one of her top three picks in the BNN Bloomberg market call, suggesting that her overall lift market share of 17% makes her an excellent long-term investment with an excellent balance between sales and services, at 57% and 43% respectively. This makes it worthy of these best stocks to buy listing for 2021. Can you say recurring income? NextEra Energy (NEE) Source: madamF/Shutterstock.com Recently, I recommended this Florida-based public service company because of its renewable energy business, NextEra Energy Resources, which generates nearly 40% of overall revenue. I maintain that NEE shares is one of the best stocks to buy for 2021, which represents the month of November on this list. NEE stock is a thing of beauty if consistent returns are your thing. YTD, is up 20%. In the last three, five and 10-year periods, it has annualised a total return of 25.1%, 26.8% and 20.5%, respectively. Let's say he's crushing his peers during any of these periods. NextEra's free cash flow over the past 12 months is $2.1 billion, while its business value is $190 billion, for an FCF yield of -3.2%. So, it's certainly not cheap. But Mark Hake of InvestorPlace made an interesting remark on November 25, when he suggested that NextEra would buy another utility with its hefty share price. As hake would agree, this is capital allocation 101. NextEra made overtures to Duke Energy (NYSE:DUK) and Evergy (NYSE:EVRG). Both rejected the offers. However, I'm sure something will shake soon. As Hake said, an offer could come with more cash. What I do know for sure is that NextEra is one of the best managed utilities in North America. Dollar General (DG) Source: Jonathan Weiss/Shutterstock.com Representing the last month of the year is Dollar General, the dollar store discount chain with 17,000 locations in 46 states. It is having another strong year, up nearly 37% YTD. Combine with total profitability 10 years of 20.8%, and you have a heck of a long-term investment. As for 12-month free cash flow, it has $3.1 billion, along with an business value of nearly $64 billion. Right now, its FCF return is 5.9%. On November 14, the company announced the opening of its 17,000 store in Fountain, Colorado. As a good gesture to the community, Dollar General donated $17,000 to one of the local schools. Local. Our foundation more than 80 years ago, we have remained focused on helping customers save time and money, said CEO Todd Vasos in the company's press release announcing the occasion. In my book, helping customers save time and money are the hallmarks of any successful business. In November, I also recommended Dollar General as one of three stock of relative values compared to Nio (NYSE:NIO), the Chinese manufacturer of electric vehicles. And while I like Nio in the long run, it's not a name to buy in the short term at current prices. The stock of DG is much lower on earth. As long as working people need to save money, Dollar General's business remains a solid bet. In turn, this makes it one of the best stocks to buy going into the uncertainty of 2021. Despite the new coronavirus pandemic, 2020 was a strong year for stocks, and some new growth stocks in particular. The March thaw may have caused some investors' ulcers to erupt. However, it paved the way for major indexes such as the Nasdaq and the S&P P 500 to reach new all-time highs in the following months. Shares called stay at home such as Zoom Video (NASDAQ:ZM) and Peloton (NASDAQ:PTON) rose more than 400%, while tech leaders such as Apple (NASDAQ:APPL) and Nvidia (NASDAQ:NVDA) saw their stock prices more than double the year. So where is growth likely to come from in 2021? Will these actions continue to be all stars or other growth stocks will steal the limelight? 7 Short-term stock to buy for a Happy New Year Many investors are betting on the reopening game as more people get vaccine against the Covid-19 and the U.S. economy reopens in earnest. Others are betting on a continued shift in capital in cyclical stocks. But whatever happens, not all growth actions are created equal by 2021. With that in mind, here are four growth stocks that could double in the next 12 months: InvestorPlace - Stock Market News, Stock Advice & & Trading Tips Coty (NYSE: COTY) Draftkings (NASDAQ:DKNG) Qualcomm (NASDAQ:QCOM) UPS (NYSE:UPS) Growth Stocks That Should Double: Coty (COTY) Source: Konektus Photo/Shutterstock.com At $7 a share, Coty Shares is barely out of penny stock range. But despite its relatively cheap valuation, shares of the beauty retailer that specializes in fragrances, cosmetics, skincare and nail care have been rising sharply in recent months. In a five-day trading session in late November, Coty's share price rose 48%. Since October 1, shares have climbed 145%. The impressive growth has been boosted by a better-than-expected earnings report that bolstered the company's rotation effort is succeeding. An announcement that Coty would complete the sale of his business Wella hair care in KKR (NYSE:KKR) also gave the share price a lift. Specifically, Coty reported a surprise profit for its fiscal first quarter, announced on November 4. The company posted an adjusted earnings per share of 11 cents, compared with the 5 cents per share that analysts had forecast. The surprise benefit was to be a vote of confidence in Coty's new CEO, Sue Nabi, who is the company's third CEO in a year. Wall Street is hopeful that Sue Nabi is taking Coty in the right direction after several unsuccessful attempts at change for the cosmetics company that has been in business since 1904. Coty shares got a further boost when it announced that a 60% stake it held in Wella would sell to KKR for $2.5 billion at the end of November. Coty will retain the remaining 40% stake he owns in Wella and has said he plans to use $2 billion of revenue to pay off the debt. All these steps position Coty for continued success in 2021. Draftkings (DKNG) Source: Lori Butcher/Shutterstock.com With the widespread distribution of a Covid-19 vaccine, the sport should really return in 2021. We're talking about all sports - college football, March Madness, the Olympics, and so on. Professional basketball, baseball, football and hockey should welcome fans back to stadiums and resume their regular schedules. And all goes well for sports betting operator Draftkings. The company, which went public through a special acquisition agreement (SPAC) in June 2020, has seen its share price rise 29% in the past six months to $53.90. But this past year has been extremely difficult in the sports world and draftkings' main business of betting on sport. Many of the most lucrative Draftkings sporting events, such as March Madness, were cancelled last year. This pushed the future of DKNG shares into question, but it has managed to stay strong this year regardless. 7 Vegan stocks to buy now for the future of food in 2021, DKNG shares should do much better. Not only will most major sporting events resume normally in the New Year, but there are growing expectations that more U.S. states will legalize sports betting in the coming months. Oppenheimer analysts recently noted that many states face income deficiencies due to the Covid-19 pandemic, and, as budget deficits swell, they can turn to sports betting as a new source of revenue. Oppenheimer expects New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Ohio to legalize sports betting in the coming year. This would certainly help lift DKNG shares to new heights. Qualcomm (QCOM) Source: jejim/Shutterstock.com Despite its spotty deployment to date, 5G wireless is here and will become the dominant form of advancing connectivity. And several companies are positioned to capitalize on the 5G revolution that is expected to take me to society to new technological realms. is one of the companies that will most likely receive 5G rewards. The semiconductor and software manufacturer is benefiting from the use of its microchips in various 5G wireless technologies and platforms. In particular, Qualcomm chips are being inserted into an increasing number of Android 5G mobile phones. Qualcomm isn't just at the forefront of 5G 5G is making the 5G revolution possible. The massive potential of 5G is reflected in the growth of QCOM shares. Qualcomm's share price has more than doubled since March 2020, rising 144% to $147.42 per share. And analysts see big things ahead of stocks. Morgan Stanley named Qualcomm as one of the top 10 stocks positioned to benefit from the global 5G rollout. Other analysts covering the company have an average price target of $165 per share in Qualcomm shares, with a high estimate of $200. Given the continued deployment and adoption of 5G networks and technologies worldwide, next year looks very bright for Qualcomm and its shareholders. UPS (UPS) Source: Sundry Photography/Shutterstock.com Not only is UPS still benefiting from people who order online while sheltering at home, but the delivery and logistics company is also about to make a profit from the massive rollout of Covid-19 vaccines across the United States and around the world. This is the time for companies like UPS to shine, and the Atlanta-based company, Georgia is doing just that. UPS is increasing its operations and working twice as long to meet unprecedented demand and help all of us overcome the global pandemic. These efforts have helped UPS shares reach new highs, with 113% since March at $175.18 per share. By 2021, ups has momentum on his side. The company saw strong earnings on its third-quarter earnings. Specifically, the company's revenue grew by 16% year-on-year to $21.2 billion and its earnings per share rose 10% to $2.28 per share. This beat EPS analysts' expectations of $1.90 per share. While UPS declined to provide forward guidance on its earnings, the company has aggressively expanded its North American operations throughout 2020. 9 Strong-performing stocks to sell before the end of the year in Canada, for example, UPS has opened a new $800 million worth of sorting packages and delivery center. The company has also hired more than 5,000 employees amid the pandemic. As such, the company shows no signs of slowing down into the New Year. Things are going from bad to worse for Nikola (NKLA). For an action that caught fire in the first half of the year, the electric truck maker's decline has been brutal. A series of events - allegations of fraud committed by founder Trevor Milton, his subsequent resignation, a severely overwhelming deal with General Motors - have sent investors to the exit gates. Now it seems that even trash wants nothing to do with Nikola.Wednesday, the company announced that its plan to design and build BEV garbage reject trucks for waste collection company Republic Services has collapsed. The company has cited that the cost to build the trucks would be higher than expected and would take too long, after both sides concluded that building the waste truck using the Nikola Tre as a base would not work. The market evidently did not like the latest setback and shares fell by almost 20% during the last two stock market sessions. Deutsche Bank analyst Emmanuel Rosner says RSG was Nikola Tre's only external client announced so far, and was perceived as providing some external validation of its economy. However, putting a positive spin on proceedings, the analyst believes the severity of the deal could work in Nikola's favor. The waste truck would have required large expenses that were not necessarily transferable to other core business activities and the TAM is also relatively small, the analyst noted. That said, Nikola has other issues to deal with; the analyst is uneasy about the development of Nikola's BEV truck, which is scheduled for late 2021. Although the first trucks have been manufactured and are currently undergoing testing, no customers have yet been announced, and Nikola's economy with it could be unfavourable for years. Overall, Rosner summarized, We remain on the sidelines of NKLA, and will be closely studying some of the milestones expected to be announced in 1H21, including a potential hydrogen infrastructure partner. Consequently, the analyst rates NKLA shares a Hold, though he might also have said Buy - because his $26 price target implies ~88% upward from current levels. (To see Rosner's trajectory, click here) Rosner's colleagues think Nikola is worth it. The average price target is a touch higher than Rosner's and $26.67 implies earnings of 92.5%. In total, the action has a moderate purchasing consensus based on 3 Purchases, 4 Holds and 1 Sell. Disclaimer: The opinions expressed in this article are solely those of the prominent analyst. The content is intended to be used only for informational purposes. It is very important to do your own analysis before making any investment. The decade-long battery maker went public by merging into an SPAC in November. Since then, its shares have had a noticeable rise. Why is it a bit of a mystery. This article will explain what penny stocks are and discuss four cent stocks below $1 to see how small cap stocks continue a hot streak this winter. In the early hours, what are penny stocks? In short, these are shares of companies that trade for less than $5. Penny shares are well known for their volatility apart from their cheap price. But if you're looking at stocks under $1 or those closest to $5, it's important to keep some things in mind. First of all, understand what you're buying and why you're buying it. Just saying that penny stock trading is not the goal. You're in the market to make money. Therefore, identifying the entry and exit targets are obviously important. Also, it is that you should have a basic strategy in mind. Are you looking at penny trading day stocks or do you have a long-term idea in mind? In addition, it is important to consider the changes in price and how quickly they are happening. Small-cap stocks continue their hot streak Why would anyone want to buy penny shares right now? Case in point, small cap stocks are red hot right now. Check the reference ETF, the Russell 2000 (IWM). While the S&; Q, the Dow and even the Nasdaq are struggling to maintain a bustling trend, the IWM just made new all-time highs on Wednesday. Given the strength in small-cap stocks - especially stocks under $1 - it's wise to at least have some trending names on your watch list. When finding penny stocks to buy, be sure to evaluate each trade independently and plan accordingly. Most do not plan to invest in penny stocks that are rising and falling 50% in seconds. Also, day traders don't normally jump into a stock that barely fluctuates in price. As a rule, the lower the price, the higher the volatility. This is simply because a small movement in price is equivalent to a larger percentage change. With that in mind are any of those penny stocks under $1 on your watch list right now? Tonix Pharmaceuticals Tonix Pharmaceuticals Corp. (NASDAQ: TNXP) is another penny stock below $1 gaining steam before the end of the year. This week the company came out with news that it ended the purchase of approximately 44 acres in Montana. This will be the place for your vaccine development and manufacturing facilities. This adds to the company's growing footprint as well. A few months ago, Tonix also bought a 40,000 square metre facility These two facilities will support the development and production of the company's vaccine candidates. If you're new to the history of TNXP shares, the company is currently developing TNX-1800 as a potential vaccine against COVID-19, as well as TNX-801 for a smallpox/monkey vaccine. Specifically, the TNX-1800 has been a center of attention as you could imagine. Many vaccine actions against coronavirus have gained interest in recent months. In this case, Tonix intends to report the effectiveness data of animal challenge studies of the vaccine candidate next term. Biolase Biolase Inc (NASDAQ: BIOL) is another lower-priced penny stock making moves by the end of the year. This week alone, the penny stock has climbed from around $0.27 to more than $0.31. While this is only a $0.04 move, it equates to a nearly 15% jump in price since Monday. Unlike biolase other biotechnology companies, it focuses mainly on the products used in oral health. The company's main products are dental laser systems that perform a wide range of procedures, including cosmetic and complex surgical applications. Last month, the company launched Waterlase Endo Academy to encourage education and best practices for integrating Waterlase technology into clinical settings. As endodontists continue to seek more advanced solutions for difficult cases, the academy will serve as a resource for some of the largest minds in the field to elevate the spread of best practices for integrating advanced technology like the Waterlase, said Todd Norbe, president and CEO of Biolase.Jaguar Health Inc. (NASDAQ: JAGX) has continued to climb this week. Wednesday saw cent shares further extend their December earnings and reach highs of more than $0.90. While we've reported on the company for weeks, this week's biggest move comes after Jaguar's latest update. The company signed an agreement for a non-dilutive royalty financing operation. Jaguar will sell a royalties interest on future royalties from its Mytesi® (crofelemer) and lechlemer for an aggregate purchase price of $6 million. Lisa Conte, president and CEO of Jaguar, explained that, The timing of this transaction aligns well with the progress of the phase 3 trial recently initiated for the CTD, for which patient enrollment is progressing. It should also be borne in mind that the company held preliminary discussions with Swiss Growth Forum, sponsor of a European special purpose acquisition company, Post Pandemic Recovery Equity. There is a potential agreement with SPAC and an operating subsidiary of Jaguar to be established in Europe an exclusive license for crofelemer and Mytesis for indications of inflammatory diarrhea and HIV-related diarrhea. Senseonics Holdings Inc. (NYSE: SENS) began firing this week after a major U.S. patent victory. Senseonics was granted a patent entitled Detection System remotely powered with multiple detection devices. Bearing in mind that company is a medical device company, patent victories come in handy. Senseonics implantable glucose monitoring systems are used by patients with diabetes. The company's CGM systems, Eversense® and Eversense® XL, include a small sensor inserted under the skin. This communicates with a smart transmitter used on the sensor. The data is sent every five minutes to a mobile app on the user's smartphone. Adding to the reasons to see Senseonics, earlier this year the company entered into a collaboration with Ascensia Diabetes Care, a global diabetes care company. Towards early 2021, there are some things traders are following. One of those things is the initiation of trade activities outside the U.S. with the help of Ascensia. The company also expects a decision on the approval of its Eversense product by the FDA in the first half of the year. Chinese authorities are investigating an e-commerce giant, Google may be tightening its grip on the investigation and VCs weigh in on the biggest surprises of the year. The State Administration of China for Market Regulation said it is investigating the e-commerce giant over a policy that requires merchants to sell exclusively with Alibaba and skip rival platforms JD.com and Pinduoduo. Alibaba will actively cooperate with regulators in the investigation, the company said in a statement. These are the main dividend stocks in the Russell 1000 with the highest forward dividend yield for January. (Bloomberg) -- U.S.-listed Alibaba Group Holding shares fell further on concern about China's investigation into alleged monopolist practices at the e-commerce company. Affiliate Ant Group Co., the other pillar of billionaire Jack Ma's Internet empire, was also summoned to a high-level meeting on financial regulations. Pressure on Ma is critical to China's broader effort to strengthen itself in an increasingly influential Internet sphere: the draft antitrust rules published in November gave the government wide latitude to retain entrepreneurs who until recently enjoyed unusual freedom to expand their reins. Alibaba's research is a warning that winds have changed, Bloomberg Intelligence said in a note The risk, wrote analyst Vey-Sern Ling, is that trade deals could face long-term headwinds as a result of these moves. Shares fell 13% in their biggest one-day drop on record. The decline took Alibaba to its lowest level since July, and shares are down 30% since an October high. Approximately 141 million shares exchanged hands, mostly for a since its debut in 2014. Alibaba said in a statement that it will cooperate with regulators in its investigation, and that its operations remain normal. Once hailed as driving economic prosperity and symbols of the country's technological prowess, Alibaba and rivals such as Tencent Holdings Ltd. are facing growing pressure from regulators after amassing hundreds of millions of users and gaining influence over almost every aspect of everyday life in China. It is clearly an escalation of coordinated efforts to reinvent itself in Jack Ma's empire, which symbolized new entities too large to fail china, said Dong Ximiao, a researcher at the Zhongguancun Institute of Internet Finance. The Chinese authorities want to see a smaller, less dominant and more compatible company. Read more: Jack Ma Goes Quiet After Ant Group's Spectacular Undoing The State Administration for Market Regulation is investigating Alibaba, the leading antitrust watchdog, said in a statement without further details. Regulators, including the central bank and banking watchdog, will separately take subsidiary Ant to a meeting aimed at driving home increasingly stringent financial regulations, which now pose a threat to the growth of the world's largest online financial services company. Ant said in a statement on his official WeChat account that he will study and meet all requirements. Ma, the flamboyant co-founder of Alibaba and Ant, has disappeared from public view since Ant's initial public offering derailed last month. In early December, the man most closely identified with the meteoric rise of China Inc. was advised by the government to stay in the country, a person familiar with the matter has said. Ma is not on the verge of a personal fall, those familiar with the situation have said. His public resumption is instead a warning that Beijing has lost patience with the power of its technological molecules, increasingly perceived as a threat to political and financial stability that rewards President Xi Jinping most. Alibaba fell 8% in Hong Kong to a five-month period through Thursday. Asia's largest corporation after Tencent has led losses among china's Internet sector leaders since Ant's IPO became enraged, bringing the overall toll to about $200 billion. Tencent and internet services giant Meituan finished more than 2.6% lower, while SoftBank Group Corp., Alibaba's largest shareholder, sank 1.7% in Tokyo.As China prepares to roll out the new antitrust regulations, the country's leaders have said little about how hard they plan to hold on or why they plan to stick to it. China's Internet ecosystem - very competition for the likes of Google and Facebook - is dominated by two companies, Alibaba and Tencent, through a labyrinthine network of investment that encompasses the vast majority of the country's startups in digital intelligence fields His patronage has also prepared a new generation of titans, including food and travel giant Meituan and Didi Chuxing - China's Uber. Those who thrive outside its orbit, the largest being the owner of TikTok ByteDance Ltd., are rare. The house that Jack Ma built is China's own creation: Tim CulpanThe antitrust rules now threaten to upset this status quo with a series of potential results, from a benign scenario of fines to a breakup of industry leaders. Some analysts predict that there is a crackdown coming, but a goal. They point to language in regulations that suggest a strong focus on online commerce, from exclusive forced deals with well-known traders like Pick One of Two to algorithm-based pricing that favor new users. The regulations specifically warn against selling at low cost to kick out rivals. But Beijing's various agencies seem to be coordinating their efforts - a bad sign for the internet sector. There's nothing the Chinese Communist Party doesn't control and everything that seems to be spinning out of its orbit in any way is going to retreat very quickly, said Alex Capri, a Singapore-based researcher at the Hinrich Foundation.Read more: Down $290 billion, China Tech Investors Nightmare Nightmare ScenariosThe campaign against Alibaba and his peers was launched , after Ma famously attacked Chinese regulators in a public address for delaying times. Market supervisors subsequently suspended Ant's IPO - the world's largest at $35 billion - while the antitrust watchdog threw the markets into a tail spin shortly after with its draft legislation. The People's Daily warned Thursday that fighting alleged monopolies was now a priority. The antipoly has become an urgent issue that concerns all matters, he said in a commentary coinciding with the announcement of the probe. Wild growth in markets should be slowed by law, he added. The Communist Party spokesman said in a commentary Friday that Chinese Internet companies should consider the investigation into Alibaba as an opportunity to improve their awareness of fair competition and antitrust practices. The chances that Ant will be able to revive his massive stock listing next year look increasingly slim as China revises rules governing the fintech industry, which in recent years has risen as an alternative to traditional state-backed loans. China is said to have separately set up a joint working group to oversee Ant, led by the Financial Stability and Development Committee, a financial system regulator, along with several central bank and other regulators. The group is in regular contact with Ant to collect data and other materials, studying its restructuring, as well as drafting other rules for the fintech industry. China has simplified much of the bureaucracy, so it is easier different regulatory bodies to work together now, said Mark Tanner, managing director of Shanghai-based consulting firm China Skinny. Of all the regulatory hurdles, this is the biggest by a long shot. Dissecting China's crackdown on its internet giants: QuickTake (Updates with people's daily commentary in paragraph 18.) In addition, phase 1 testing did not generate serious adverse safety events and only six Grade I adverse events, which were mostly minor reactions from the injection site. Related link: Why a COVID-19 vaccine makes General Electric's 'More Investable'Why It's Important: Inovio's INO-4800 coronavirus candidate didn't come close to winning the race on the market, as vaccines from Pfizer Inc. (NYSE: PFE) and Moderna Inc (NASDAQ: MRNA) are already authorized by the FDA. However, Moderna's vaccine must be stored and transported at negative temperatures of 20 celsius, and Pfizer's vaccine must be stored and transported at negative temperatures of 70 centimeters, colder than winter temperatures in Antarctica. INO-4800, on the other hand, is stable at room temperature for more than a year. It also doesn't need to be frozen during conveyor storage, potentially making it faster and more cost effective to distribute. Inovio shares are up 205% year-on-year but have dropped by 53.3% in the last six months as candidates to vaccinate have apparently made progress in the race to combat the pandemic. Benzinga's Take: Assuming it is as effective and safe as competing vaccines, Inovio's candidate could end up being the standard bearer of COVID-19 and future variants of the coronavirus vaccine. Analysts have estimated that the global COVID-19 vaccine market could be worth $10 billion annually, so it is understandable why Inovio investors are excited given the company's $1.7 billion market cap. There is a growing sense of optimism, engenred by the availability of COVID vaccines and the potential they give for a return to normal on the main streets across the country. Finally, the possibility of social blockade and distancing regimes actually ending, and in the short term. There is a real possibility that, by the end of a 2021, John Q. Public may get back on its feet.Combine this with the current boil of Wall Street, as stock markets trade at or near their all-time high levels, and we are seeing the prospect of a flag year. A return to normal grass roots will be great – but we also have the prospect of a generally rising market. Writing from JPMorgan, U.S. equity chief equity strategist Dubravko Lakos-Bujas writes: Equities face one of the best backdrops in years. The risks related to global trade tensions, political uncertainty and the pandemic will go away. At the same time, liquidity conditions are still extremely favourable and there is an extremely favourable interest rate environment. This is a Goldilocks environment for risky assets. Lakos-Bujas does not shy away from quantifying his optimism. It is predicting up to 19% of earnings for the S& P 500, saying the index will reach 4,000 by early 2021 and reach 4,400 at the back of the year. Turning lakos-Bujas' outlook into concrete recommendations, JPM's cadre of stock market analysts is hitting the table on three stocks that seem particularly convincing. We ran the trio through the TipRanks database to see what other Wall Street analysts have to say. Sotera Health (SHC)Sotera Health occupies a unique niche in the healthcare sector, offering, through its affiliates, a number of security-oriented support companies for healthcare providers. These services include sterilization procedures, laboratory tests and counseling services - and their importance is immediately clear. Sotera has more than 5,800 customers from healthcare providers in more than 50 countries around the world. Although it is not a new company – two of its branches have been in business since the 1930s and 1940s – Sotera is new to the stock markets, having maintained its IPO last November. The initial offer was considered successful, raising $1.2 billion in a sale of 53.6 million shares. Earlier this month, Sotera announced it was using much of the IPO's capital to pay $1.1 billion in existing debt. This included $341 million in a first lien term loan, in addition to the $770 million in the main aggregate on a matter of senior banknotes The move allowed Sotera to increase its revolving credit facility to $347.5 million. This installation is not currently unnoticed. Among the bulls is JPM analyst Tycho Peterson who values SHC an overweight (i.e. Buy) along with a one-year price target of $35. This figure 31% upwards from current levels. (To see Peterson's trajectory, click here) SHC is uniquely positioned to benefit from healthy end market growth and favorable price dynamics, Peterson noted. Taking into account a diversified operation platform, sticky contracts of several years, an efficient pricing strategy, significant barriers to entry and high regulatory control, we project ~9% sales growth, with increased use of continued expansion driving [and] robust FCF supports continuous deleveraging, leaving us positive in both the short and long-term prospects. The Wall Street analyst body is firmly behind Peterson on this one - in fact, the 7 recent reviews are unanimous purchases, making the consensus of analysts a Strong Buy. SHC is currently trading for $26.75, and its median price target of $32.50 implies an upswing of 21.5% by the end of 2021. (See analysis of SHC actions in TipRanks) Miovant Sciences (MYOV)We stay with the health industry, and look at Myovant Sciences. This clinical research biopharmaceaceal company focuses on the main problems of reproductive system disease in both men and women. Specifically, Myovant is working to develop treatments for uterine fibroids, endometriosis and prostate cancer. The Myovant pipeline currently presents Relugolix as a treatment for fibroids and endometriosis. The drug is in phase 3 trial for the latter, and has had its NDA submitted for the former. Also in the pipeline, and related to reproductive health, is MVT-602, a new drug designed to improve egg maturation and aid in vitro fertilization. In addition, Myovant announced this month that Relugolix has been approved by the FDA – under the brand name Orgovyx – as a treatment for advanced prostate cancer. The drug is the first, and currently only, Oral Gonadotropin-Hormonal Release (GnRH) Antagonist Receptor of the disease. Orgovyx is expected to enter the market in January 2021.Analyst Eric Joseph, in his note on this action by JPM, describes how he is impressed by Relugolix based on the clinical and commercial potential of relugolix of lead assets for the treatment of endometriosis and uterine fibroids, as well as in men for the treatment of advanced prostate cancer. The analyst added: In women's health, we believe that the entire Phase 3 data so far disadvence the likelihood of relugolix approval in the U.S. for uterine fibroids and endometriosis - trading opportunities that are little reflected at current levels. In addition, we see an attractive commercial configuration for relugolix in the treatment of advanced prostate cancer as an oral LHRH alternative with a differentiated CV risk. These comments support Joseph's overweight (i.e. Buy) rating on MYOV, and his $30 price target implies an upward 31% for the next 12 months. (To view Joseph's history, click here) Overall, Strong Buy's analyst consensus rating on Myovant comes from 5 reviews, and the breakdown Clearly for the Bulls: 4 to 1 in favor buy against Hold. The average share price of the stock of $22.80 and the median price target of $36.40 give a robust upward potential of ~59%. (See myov action analysis in TipRanks) Metropolitan Bank Holding (MCB)For the third action, we will change the lanes from healthcare to finance, where Metropolitan Bank Holding operates – through its subsidiary, Metropolitan Commercial Bank – as a full-service bank for business, entrepreneurial and personal customers in the mid-market segment. The bank's services include business loans, cash management, deposits, electronic banking, personal checks and prepaid cards. In a year that has been difficult for most of us, MCB has managed to consistently post rising revenue and solid revenue. The bank's top line has increased from $33 million in T1 to $36 million in T3. EPS was stronger, at $1.27 per share, up 30% on the previous year. The gains come as the bank gives guidance of $153.9 million in total revenue for next year, which - if met - will reflect a 22% gain over 2020.While MCB's financial performance has shown steady gains, the share appreciation has not followed suit. The stock has only partially recovered losses made last winter at the height of the crown crisis, and has currently fallen 26% this year. Watching JPM's New York banking scene, analyst Steven Alexopoulos points to the general difficulties in the commercial real estate lending sector - an important part of MCB's portfolio - due to ongoing pandemic issues. In this environment, he sees the Metropolitan Bank as the right choice. We're not as bearish as most in New York real estate prospects. Having witnessed many cycles in New York, the time to buy has been when your child is running in the other direction. In past cycles, MCB has been an outperformer in credit metrics regarding its loan portfolio relative to our coverage group, Alexopoulos noted. Alexopoulos explains another key strength in MCB's lending portfolio: In an environment of low interest rates, MCB is better positioned than peers to withstand headwinds with 59% of MCB loans that are fixed rate and 67% of the remaining floating rate loans have flats to protect themselves from lower short-term rates... To this end, Alexopoulos values MCB an overweight (i.e. Buy) along with a price target of $50. If the target is met, investors could achieve pocket gains of 43% over the next year. (To see Alexopoulos' trajectory, click here) Some actions fly under the radar, and is one of those. Alexopoulos' is the only recent analyst review by this company, and it is decidedly positive. Technology stocks, along with banks, aerospace, retailers, and many other sectors have had their day in the sun and now is the time for investors to pay more attention to a dream market for alternative fuel companies, according to Jim Cramer.Hydrogen Power: At the top of the list are potential energy giants of the future such as Plug Power Inc (NASDAQ Nasdaq : PLUG) , Cramer said Tuesday on Mad Money. The hydrogen fuel cell company has seen its shares soar more than 1,000% by 2020. Fellow hydrogen cell company Bloom Energy Corp (NYSE: BE) is up 300% while Ballard Power Systems Inc (NASDAQ: BLDP) is up 200%. EV Play: Autonomous electric vehicles will not be possible without the companies that manufacture the technology that powers the cars. Luminar Technologies Inc (NASDAQ: LAZR) is a manufacturer of laser-based sensors and competes against Velodyne Lidar Inc (NASDAQ: VLDR). EV cars will need access to charging stations. At the forefront of this market is Blink Charging Co (NASDAQ: BLNK) and its shares have soared from a 52-week low of $1.25 to a high of $48.70 in 2020.But in the end it's Cramer's top pick, Quantumscape Corp (NYSE: QS), a manufacturer of a lighter and faster charging battery for EVs.Related Link: Watch Out Elon Musk.
