Photo: PxbereHack Each Friday in your city we ask for your best city tips: driving tips, restaurant recs, to-dos, and other advice for visitors and locals. Sometimes the weekly theme is a particular city. At other times it's all a side of the city, so everyone can participate. Welcome to Meet Me City. It's got a cardinal, it's a Democrat in Missouri, it's got half a sign of McDonald's along the river. It's got all the big city reporters who have left the little old wind gap. It was supposed to have a trolley by now. Hack this week Want to know what your city is good for in St. Louis, the secret, every Monday to hack your city, and we ask readers for the best tips for the city: driving tips, restaurant recs, to-dos, and other advice for visitors and locals. Then on Thursday, we will give the locals? What are local traditions, actions and laws? What is the atmosphere like? What is it like long term? What do you love and hate about the city? How do you hack into your commute or lunch break? How many years have it been? Where do I go if I want to leave town for a day or a week? Finally, how has the mood of the city changed in recent years? Old travel advice that no longer applies here, and what new advice? Leave a tip in the comments below, and we will highlight the best ones. (First, read other comments to make sure they're unique.) Then come back on Thursday for a new post full of highlights. Sometimes the weekly theme is a particular city. At other times it's all a side of the city, so everyone can participate. I wish I had enemies in St. Louis, Missouri, so I could call them my arch nemesis. Hahaha has an arch. It's time for the best St. Louis tips from Life Hacker readers. And we have a trolley load. I have a feeling that everyone is going to dump it in St. Louis. Inimoi says. Fabulous. If you can't understand its innate Midwest. Pictured: Keith Yahilit & Linkimo's pizza is controversial. Mostly because of cheese, not mozzarella, but cracker-thin crust is also the point of some cheese and tatum. It's worth a try, but you may need to plan for a backup if it's not what you want. —Pro Tips for David I. Smith To do well or get something crunchy. —TheDudeSubsidesimo's pizzas are overrated and overrated, so go to Tallinana or Lacanelli. —Hey, damn shut up, go to Drus. Get the concrete. Then go back the next day and do it again. —BubbaRubugioia's deli (pronounced Zoe-Wu) actually has an amazing 'hot salami' that makes cheese into head cheese, but don't let that scare you away. —Chumanpupapi's Smoak House and Bogart's Smoak house are the two best places to eat throughout the city. (Sugarfire was fine.) Get the ribs and the bunt is also over. Bogart also has a really good pastrami. —As far as Corina remembers, the restaurant is a barbecue joint called Shaved Duck. We went there and won some James Beard restaurants. The shaved duck blew James Beard's seat out of the water. —The Itokodelma Loop is a great place to visit with a number of unique shops. Snow Factory is a delicious Thai-style ice cream spot. —Serve with Beast-grilled ravioli, fried grilled beef ravioli and marinara sauce for dipping. They are appetizers and as a child I had no idea that people boiled ravioli. —The local food scene in West Philadelphia St. Louis stands or surpasses other cities at a fraction of the cost. There's too much to name, but those who have won national acclaim will be Olio, Ellaia, Nickstar, Vicia and Nieche Food Group (several restaurants owned by James Beard award-winning chef Gerard Kraft) and our small Bosnian food truck/soon brick and mortar Balkan trite box. —plaques5 City Balm, Perennial Artisan Ales, Narrow Gauges, 4Hands, Heavy Leaf, Welsoby, Maine & There are many great craft breweries in and around the city such as Mill, Side Project, Schlafly, Earthbound and Alpha. —FoodNBeerCrown Candy Kitchen. The oldest candy store in STL, I believe. They use antique machines and candy molds to make candy. —dr. bombay Saus Grand has more nationally representative restaurants than Epcot. Café Natasha for Persian and all the gin you could want, Filipino food truck guerrilla street food turned vines for bricks and mortar, Meskerem Ethiopia, and killer cheap Lebanese food. Many vegetarian dishes are also available. —Juleani Monk Moundphoto on Cahokia Mound: If Ron CogswellSee and Allotment are in strange or scary, Rems Mansion is a gruesome stop. —I remember visiting the city for ballgames and family events before moving to the darkest timeline Jack Morris-Saint-Louis. That means one or two Soulard bars before baseball, then drive straight to the suburbs. The city really ruled out the opportunity of experiencing a large area that was created. If you can give advice to all visitors, you will make a list of your neighbors and hit as many people as possible. —Ascolami It's a very trendy hipster area, but it's also an official/informal pride district - LGBTQ bars and dance clubs (both gay and straight). Cherokee Street is an Uber hipster/bohemian hangout, but it's also a Latino/cultural hub. Many restaurants, specialty bars, tattoo parlours, and tons of great Mexican food. —Visit the new cathedral on the wide road of Lindell, whether potsmaster1984 or not. It has one of the largest mosaics in the West Hemisphere and is really a sight to see. —Visit near the Kahokia Mound across the Mike River. Former native city with impressive hand-made mounds. It is also a UNESCO World Heritage Site. —Scaro Democratic Vinyl is a huge old record store worth checking out just for the elements that evoke nostalgia. —The BarriacAchi site was just reopened and a new museum was opened. —TeamPunkassRacing Unless your main goal is to visit arches, I will steer clear. It's a long wait, an elevator sucks at the top, and it's rather overwhelming (at least from my experience). —Joe the average guy I agree with. Walking along the riverside and seeing the arches is not really going up to the arch, but you're having a better time. —FoodNBeer City Museum: We can't find any other places like this. Basically a huge playground made of random rubbish: school buses on the roof, gut planes, secret passageways, slides everywhere, etc. bring knee pads and let the kids go crazy. —Beware that the Matto City Museum is not for everyone. I had a legitimate panic attack because it's just so much everything, total sensory overload. I sat in the 'lobby' area of the cave and cried for half an hour. —MayAfternoonna thinks the Grand Center doesn't get enough love for this kind of post. You know foxes for shows, Powell Hall for symphonies, all the local people know about them. But there are also things like Circus Flora, the (free) Museum of Modern Art, Sheldon for art and music, Jazz St. Louis, and public media commons with amazing PBS ties in programming and events. —The architecture of Julienrafayet Square is some of the best in the country (painted ladies are considered the finest in the country). —At the KCMO fo sho restaurant we visited the butterfly house and my 4yo son loved it. We went in October so there were 'creepy' bugs (scorpions, beetles, cockroaches, spiders) and carnivorous plants on display, and a butterfly conservatory on display. It was awesome. —One of the more forward-thinking things SteebSant Lewis did was tax homeowners in the county for the city and museum districts. This means that zoos, art galleries, science centers and natural history museums are all free to go. Seriously, walk to the zoo at any time without paying a penny. Even better, they are all within a forest park which is one of the bigger, parks of the country. You can spend 4 days in Forest Park and never leave. —Inimoi Sainte-Lewis has some of the best art galleries in the country. After finishing the beautiful Amy Sherd exhibition, the Museum of Modern Art (CAM) is currently hosting the Basquiart exhibition and continues to host amazing local and international artists. The St. Louis Museum of Art (SLAM) has just opened its opening of Kehinde Warley, and the museum is filled with beautiful master works and fine contemporary art wings. The Pulitzer Museum is one of the most unique spaces I have ever been in, and the quality of the exhibits is on par with any museum in the country. All these museums are free! —Frida Khalid City Museumphoto: sawdust_mediaKnow Isa Plan Sainte-Lewis is typical Midwestern. People will nod and smile, and people will also block you from traffic jams and steal parking spaces without regret. St. Louis is also home to dozens of municipalities. Cities and counties are separate political organizations (the city is not part of the county at all) and each municipality has its own shortcomings. Don't be surprised about driving through a bunch of them. —Good luck heading east of Bouvarubub. All major highways are under construction in the city. It is an absolute f'cking mess. —notGeorgeLucas For all the bad press we can get we get this city pretty sleepy, especially if you just visit. All crime in the city occurs in a relatively small area, and if you stay away from it, you will be fine. —Ocanties enjoy creating their own lanes at intersections. When the road is wide enough for two cars to scratch each other, someone slides right into the DM and use this nonexistent lane as a bypass lane. —David E. Smith said that there is a very loose policy for the container, or that the policy is loosely enforced. I didn't notice the answer, but a lot of people are carrying drinks around various areas of downtown STL. —Jeff Kent's Mustache Photo: Chuck Cockergert Out of Town The world's largest cat bottle is a 20-minute drive east. —gewl Mastodon State Historic Site. Locals don't know much about this, so rent a car. Spring is the best time to visit. Great museum with fossils and artifacts. The outdoor area is inviting and a great place for a family picnic. —Inimoi Sainte-Lewis was the first major stop on old Route 66, so it stops at some of the highlights of Route 66. The old Chain of Rocks Bridge (which has been closed for many years) is a bit of a pedestrian/cycling bridge. It was a day famous for its unexplained 45-degree turn in the middle of the river. It's fun to imagine an old giant car running along and squeezing along each other. —TheMeanestSnowflake Read everything because most of these comments left far more tips than we quoted.
