This is how the university as a whole has been rated for its quality of teaching: silver gold or copper. Note, not all universities have taken part in the TEF. Have a question about this information? Learn more hereThis information from the National Student Survey, an annual student survey of the final student. You can use this to see how satisfying students study this subject area of this university, they are (not the individual course). We calculate a mean rating of all responses to indicate whether that's high, average or low compared to the same subject area of other universities. Have a question about this information? Learn more about hereThis is from the Higher Education Agency (HESA). You can use this to get an idea of who you might share a conference and and how to progress in this topic, here. It's also worth comparing typical A-level topics and grade students to achieve with the actual entry requirements; similarity or differences here could indicate how flexible (or not) a university might be.
