I have done some cover letters, but when it comes to writing about the companies I apply for, I struggle and end up writing something from their website, probably about csr. I don't think my cover letter really stands out. How do you guys research companies/get things to write about besides their websites and the latest news articles? Or is there something I should look for specifically on their website? Thanks in advance Page 2 27 comments Hello, I am a senior graduated in May hoping to go to Equity Research. I'm just looking for some advice or examples for a cover letter. Anything I should focus on specifically? What jumps to the employer? Any suggestions would be very grateful! designed for investment bankers saved my life. Are you a perfectionist who can't get words onto the page, or lazy that won't try... It'll save you too. Customize it for the industry and your gold. And please make some changes as you write, or just use this as a reference, so we don't have a bunch of similar odd cover letters coming out in the next few weeks. I am 19yo and would like to get an internship in the financial industry this spring or summer and really don't know what the company is looking for in a cover letter. Any feedback is greatly appreciated! Page 2 13 comments Page 22 30 comments Hi, I graduated in April and luckily I have a full time position offered it's not heading to the field I want to be on. I have been working part-time as a bank teller (I am Toronto based) for several months which helped me leverage myself into a full-time financial advisory position. But, I've always been interested in the business analyst side. I've seen positions like Operation Operations Jr Business Analyst, jr Financial Analyst, etc. They all have general requirements.. Solid computer skills including proficiency in Excel and strong analytical skillsAbility to work independently and achieve daily deliveryTwo for three years of asset banking experienceExcellent organizational skills Analytical and problem solving skillsI believe that I have the necessary skills to customize the role, but I am not sure how to compose my cover letter to match areas that I do not have relevant work experience. I usually start with an intro paragraph stating I believe I can fill this role because of my Skill 1, 2,3. Then my next 3 paragraphs will only be a brief explanation of that skill and how I demonstrated it in my past work experience. Any tips on how a cover letter should be structured for a position with no previous experience? I worked now for 2.5 years after graduation. I really don't like my job and the management I work for. I want to move to a different city and have the ability to move in the drop cap. (currently living with a friend without rent and both cities I want to move also I have arranged life choices). That being said I'm having trouble getting attention outside the city I live in. Part of it was my resume and my lack of ability to write an effective cover letter. I included both a copy under my current resume and a cover letter that Ive used for the analyst role. I am at the point where I am willing to pay for help. If you want to offer your edits and it leads to work I would be willing to send gifts your way. If you know a successful service id is willing to sign up for it as well. Any help would be greatly appreciated, positive or negative. ResumeCover LetterPage 2 12 comments Hi all, I have graduated in the summer of 2017 and have been looking for a job in equity research/asset management. I have sent my CV and cover letter to many places but I haven't even done an interview. I studied Finance and Economics in england in a non-target school. I am quite desperate now and have started to see a wider range of roles because I have been unemployed for about 5 months now. I've put a picture of my cover letter here (sorry if it's not allowed here, but the cover letter subreddit looks pretty blank). Any thought would be greatly appreciated. The company I'm proposing is an equity research firm specializing in technology. I have sent many cover letters with the same foundation as this one, but specific things Was last modified on. Just a side note, I think it might take too long? I've seen a lot of really short American cover letters, but the cover letters I've seen in the UK, and a lot of my friends write old letters, are around the page in length. 2 2 comments comment comments
