Ground bees stingers

Wasps are known for their stings - if you don't know anything else about them, you probably recognize which end to avoid. But where do they get their stingers, and what purpose do they serve? Move even further back in the Jurassic period, before the bees and wasps separate paths in their evolutionary paths, and you will find that these stings can be traced back to a small female egg-laying organ called an ovipositor. This is why you will find only female wasps packing heat. Prehistoric parasitic wasps would use an exhaust pendant to lay eggs directly on live insects such as caterpillars -- which hatching larvae would then consume. But why lay eggs on a caterpillar when, with a little evolution, you can lay them directly in your victim? Thus, ovipositors have become sharp, sometimes saw-toothed, all to help wasps perform this operation better. And since the selected hosts of insects tended to attack and combat the progress of wasps, ovipositors also evolved to pack a poisonous blow. Some modern parasitic wasp continue this very practice, whether pepperily filling the outer parts or filling the bodies of their hosts with dozens of eggs. Other wasps have evolved far from practice, but the poisonous sting remains -- no longer an instrument of reproduction, but a powerful biological weapon. Wasp poison is produced inside the poisonous gland, and then stored in a bag of poison. From here it leaks through the valves to stun the smooth stinger without barbs. The wasp keeps this vicious little weapon stored in the sheath, ready to plunge it into prey or aggressors at the moment of notification. Males do not have stingers, but this does not prevent them from bluffing. When cornered, male wasps have been known to brandish their harmless backlogs in the empty threat. But how does the poison go, and how can something so small hurt so much? Read the following page to find out. This site is not available in your country We include products that we think are useful for our readers. If you buy through links on this site, we can earn a small commission. Here's our process. What happens when a bee stings you? For most people, a bee sting is just a nuisance. You may experience temporary sharp pain, swelling, redness, heat and itching at the injection site, but without more serious complications. If you are allergic to bees, or are stung repeatedly, bee stings can be more problematic. They can even be life-threatening. When a bee stings you, its stinger is released into your skin. It ultimately kills the bee. Bees are the only species of bees that die after stinging. Wasps and other species do not lose their stingers. Maybe they'll stab you more than once. If a bee stings you, it leaves behind a poisonous toxin that can cause pain and other symptoms. Some people are allergic to this toxin. Mild allergic reactions can cause extreme redness and increased swelling at the injection site. Severe allergic Can cause: hives pale skin severe itchy tongue and glands difficulty breathing rapid pulse nausea and vomiting joint aches dizziness loss of consciousness If you have any signs of a severe reaction to a bee sting, get an ambulance. You may have an anaphylactic shock, a life-threatening allergic reaction. Unless you are allergic to bees or have signs of a severe allergic reaction, you can treat most bee stings at home. If a bee stings you, immediately remove the stinger with the edge of the nail or the edge of the credit card. This helps to curb the amount of toxins released into your skin. Wash the puncture site with soap and water. Glazing the injection site is the most effective way to reduce the absorption of poisons. It can also help reduce swelling. Most home treatments for bee sting symptoms are not supported by scientific research. Nevertheless, they have been passed down for generations. These home remedies can help relieve the symptoms of a bee sting: Honey-Honey can help with wound healing, pain and itching. To treat bee stings with honey, apply a small amount on the affected area. Cover with a loose bandage and leave to go for up to an hour. Baking soda A baking soda and water can help neutralize bee toxins to reduce pain, itching and swelling. Apply a thick layer of baking soda paste to the affected area. Cover the paste with a bandage. Leave to take for at least 15 minutes and reapply as needed. Apple cider vinegar Some people believe that vinegar helps neutralize bee venom. Wound the injection site into the sink of diluted apple cider vinegar for at least 15 minutes. You can also soak the bandage or cloth in vinegar, and then apply it to the injection site. Toothpaste It is unclear why toothpaste can help bee stings. Some people claim that alkaline toothpaste neutralizes the acidic poison of honey bees. If true, however, toothpaste will not work on the alkaline wasp poison. Either way, toothpaste is an inexpensive and simple home remedy to try. Simply dab a little on the affected area. Meat tenderizer An enzyme found in meat tenderizer called papain is also believed to help break down a protein that causes pain and itching. To treat the bee sting in this way, make a solution of a one-piece meat tenderizer and four-part water. Apply to the puncture site for up to 30 minutes. Wet aspirin tablet A popular home remedy to reduce pain and swelling of a bee sting is to apply wet aspirin or aspirin paste to the injection site. The results of one 2003 study showed that applying aspirin in melting to bee stings or wasp stings actually increased redness and did not reduce the duration of swelling or pain compared to using ice alone. Herbs and oils So herbs have wound healing properties and can help relieve the symptoms of a bee sting: Aloe vera is known for relieving the skin and relieving pain. If you have an aloe vera plant, break off the leaf and gel directly to the affected area. Calendula Calendula is an antiseptic used to heal minor wounds and relieve skin irritation. Apply the cream directly to the injection site and cover with a bandage. Lavender essential oil has an anti-inflammatory ability and can help relieve swelling. Dilute the essential oil with carrier oil, such as coconut or olive oil. Pour a few drops of the mixture to the injection site. Tea tree oil is a natural antiseptic and can alleviate the pain of a bee sting. Mix with carrier oil and apply a drop at the injection site. Witch hazel is a tried-and-tested herbal remedy for insect bites and bee stings. It can help reduce inflammation, pain, and itching. Apply the witch's hazel directly to the bee sting as needed. Bee stings are traditionally treated with ice or cold compresses to reduce pain and swelling. Anti-inflammatories such as Motrin or Advil can also help. You can treat itching and redness with hydrocortisone cream or calamine cream. If itching and swelling are severe, taking oral antihistamines such as Benadryl can bring relief. To reduce the risk of infection, do not scratch the injection site. Scratching can intensify itching, swelling and redness. If you have had anaphylactic shock after a bee sting in the past, you will need to carry an EpiPen with you at all times. If you are re-pricked, using EpiPen can prevent a severe allergic reaction. Most bee stings do not require a call to the doctor. If you have any symptoms of a serious allergic reaction, such as difficulty breathing, hives or dizziness, call local emergency services. Don't try to drive to the E.R. If you have used an EpiPen in response to a sting, you should see your doctor. Seek an ambulance if you have been stabbed multiple times. Call your doctor if the symptoms of a bee sting do not improve after a few days. Bee stings can be painful, whether you are allergic to bees or not. If a bee stings you, try to stay calm. There's a good chance you'll be okay. Allergies to bees can occur at any time in your life, even if you have already been stung and have not had an allergic reaction. It is important to take comforting symptoms. If you know you are going to spend time outdoors, take these steps to reduce the risk of bee stings: Do not walk barefoot outside. Leave the beehives alone. Do not wear sweet-smelling perfume, hair products or body products. Do not wear bright colors or clothes with floral prints. Cover the food. Don't drive with the windows closed. Do not drink from open cans of soda. Stay away from uncovered garbage cans. Sting is a paper plane I built today that I, as far as I know, invented! Fold the right corner against you as if you were doing a square piece of paper, the next one develops and you do the same in the other corner. Then you unwrap and you should have paper with x on it. Finally invert the model and fold down to top and bottom x met. Unwrap and turn your model Over. Fold the folding model line into each other to create a Pentagon with your model. You've created the beginning of the tip! With this you just want to follow the pictures above because it's pretty hard for me to explain. Fold the model in half so that you can see the triangle of the top. Then fold the wings. Finally open your pockets on the inside of the plane. Your model is now ready to fly! Put your index finger and middle finger slightly in the pockets of the plane. Then throw by pulling your hand to the side and pushing it with your hand and it will fly off your fingers. This plane I'm a pretty fast sailboat that takes practice to fly, but it works really well! In addition to aesthetic benefits, more muscle means burning fat more efficiently. Here you will fine-tune two bodybuilding staples and end up with a core-crunching bonus. For each movement, work at about 80% of the maximum number of repetitions, keeping the pair in reserve in each set. Continue in the style of the circle for 15 minutes, resting as needed and holding the sum of repetitions. Press the weights above you, locking your elbows. Lower them slowly until your upper arm rests on the floor, near your sides. Pause before repeating. 2 Bent row: 80% of your Max tails Stand with a dumbbell in each hand and gently bend your knees, leaning against your hip so that your upper body is almost parallel to the floor. Paddle both weights towards the hips, keeping the core firm and back straight. Bring the weights under control and repeat. 3 Hollow-Hold Sweater: 80% of your Max tails lie on the floor, lifting your legs a few centimeters. Push your lower back into the ground to lift your head and shoulders off the floor. Reach back to grab a dumbbell behind your head. With straight hands, put it over your head and above your chest. Pause, then get it back under control. 4 Where to find the full 15-minute weight loss exercise guide Whether you're a beginner or an old hand, our 15-minute workouts make building a leaner, healthier body an achievable daily endeavor.
