failure, with a certain chance, a fire or a large cockroach attack. In addition to the basic resources of manufacturing facilities, there are several possibilities, such as medical stations producing medicines, radiation-resistant scientific laboratories, and there are radio stations, Gymnasiums and more that hire outside survivors. Most of the facilities need staff to work, and the efficiency of the work depends on the qualifications of the personnel assigned to the facility, the seven main features of the aforementioned S.P.E.C.I.A.L. Different facilities require different features, so players need to deploy the right facilities to the right people to maximize human resources. The higher the level of facilities, the higher the population of shelters, and the more facilities there are, the more people need to work more smoothly. However, survivors Having children - this is limited enough to fill empty, which leads to the core of the game. Having children, players communicate when they bring heterosexual men and women together in the living room, the atmosphere gets warmer and warmer, and the room will be a great harmony of life. It sounds terrible, but that's the environment. When a man and a woman appear in harmony with life, the woman's stomach is large (very fast!), but you also need to live a few hours before the child, during which time, the player can still send pregnant women to continue working until the child is born. Why do kids say that's the essence of the game? Since this shelter is the fastest way to expand its population, with its population base, follow-up advanced facilities can be achieved. In addition, as the game progresses, you need a lot of labor to produce, which will make more plant resources higher and higher demand. However, it is not that you can play well without the brain to have children. The expansion of staff will lead to shortages of food and water at three key sources, which will lead to electricity shortages and the need to build more power generation plants; Labor facilities, last resort and natural need to build the expansion of the population. In this way, it created a vicious circle. Population growth is not difficult, but it is very difficult to grasp the balance of population and resources. It can be said that this is a study of when the child is more suitable play. The problem is that the player harasses the fact of having a baby, the question that arises when the game gets better and the whole shelter is in good order: What has he done before? Overall, in the late development simulation business game, success will have a great sense of spectacular scenery. Like the Sim City series, all the busy city panoramic view of the city, the sense of success arises spontaneously. However, this refuge, always just under the grid, is such a great feeling, then the revival of children to expand players again and again, exactly what is it for? I imagine some possibilities. First, perhaps again and again to give birth to children to create super high quality staff. However, from the point of view of children born now, there is no obvious relationship between the qualities of children and their parents. Apparently, there's no genetic system. Secondly, can people be sent to explore outside the bunker, maybe find Eden Maker? But maybe black face, try for a long time, the best time I couldn't find just one gun found. As a result, you still can't find the goal of the late game, just endless cycle of production and expansion. Maybe the only fun is these unexpected events, which suddenly broke into you The shelter of robbers and mutant monsters suddenly disrupted the rhythm of the shelter, so you have to go all out to fight. Overall, this is pretty good in all aspects, but the lack of depth of the game, players inevitably lose the meaning of continuing to play. But as part of a fan-to-work, this hand-to-hand tour contains a variety of n elements that span the game, much better than the game. If you are a fan of the Radiant series, be sure to try this.
