Usually, brak are hidden inside drawings and knife holders. But for enthusiasm like chef and fun knives, the show proudly doesn't show off their collection so it can be seen by visitors. If you're one of those with a pleasure in collecting different types of brank, to show your fascination about these utensils and to preserve their beauty as well, you can make you clean can display knives. All you need is some material (which doesn't cost much) and some effective procedures to follow. Go to your local hardware store to find the material necessary to case your knife display. Make sure that the size of the table you choose will be able to house all the knives you want to include in it. To make sure you get the right size, before you go to the hardware to get a manila paper and lay it on the floor. Find all the knives that you have and place them on the paper according to the style you want them to appear. Get a pipe measured with a pencil, and make a square that enclosure your arrangements made. This will determine the size of the chart behind you will need for your display case. Step 2: Measure the Size of FrameRepeating the same procedure in step 1, once you have accumed the chart back. Find all the knives that you have and put them on wood according to the style you want them to appear. This time, instead of the tapes measured, a frame square should be used to perform well boundary accuracy. Mark the description and use of a pencil, make sure that you have received enough space to store the knives in such a way that they don't overlap with each other. Step 3: Cut, Drilling and MountingUse saw the cutting of the chart along the lines you have highlighted. After you cut the board, find the fabric cover and upholster the board. Make sure to cut the upholstery is bigger than those in the case (about 1 inch larger) for you to be able to cover the back entirely. Flatten the lid and turn backward the frames. Now the security is upholstery in the back with some wooden rainue and making tapes. This will make sure the upholstery is not falling. After doing so, dig the holes into the canvas and secure the hooks. Mount the cabinet on the designated wall. After that, you can now show all the knives in your display case. Can you really do knife display for $6? Heck's answer is yes. Last Saturday, we were about to go to Hobby Lobby to seek potential PROJECT DIY. But Tree Dollar was right the next door, so we decided to roll around and see what we could get. We are so glad we did, because we came across these $5 wooden picture boards. Crafts section of Dollar Tree FYI, probably one of the most expensive things you can buy in Dollar Tree. When we checked out, the guy had to make sure we knew what they were $5 (because everything else in the store is $1). I wanted a knife display case for my small knife pocket for so long. All ideas can display knives I found on Pinterest would have cost at least $40 to make, and I just couldn't justify that now. Anyway, I thought these wooden frames would be perfect – cheap with just the right size. I also bought a pork sheet for padding, and add a little touch. The sheet only costs $1, but has added more than one dollar's value in value. It's not the best display display cases out there. But for less than $10, I'd say it's pretty damn good enough for what I need. Just a simple storage solution for my pocket cutter. The spot on Wood definitely took him to the next level. It was out $5 can possibly be approximately $15-$20, not bad. $5 Picture Frame Picture Frame $1 Adhesive Cork SheetWood Attached Spent Only $6! We already have the spot at home. It only took a few minutes to make (not counting the time it took for the dry spot). Remove the first glass, of course make sure to remove the glass frame and wip the frame with a clean first dress. I used a black Varathane Walnut spot for this one, since I wanted it to have a resistant antique look. I only applied one dress. Got it from Home Depot for $4.48. I bought another frame, to use for a different project. I've attached it to a different color. This is how it looks: Kona spots. Almost like a slim chocolate brown. So your choice of assignment is a matter of personal preference. Feel free to experiment. I recommend using the logs (which kept the paper), trying out different assignments, since the wood quality is the same. It will carry out similar results when you attach current frames. Little side note: The interior had some brochure portions. Those spots were some sort of glue or scotch on it, so the spot shouldn't stick to it. But not a big deal. It's on the inside, so it's not that apparent. And it's $5, you really can't expect that much of it. There's a peel of adhesive. Quick and easy. Of course, only after the assignment is circle. And be sure to dry out any excess spots and a clean coat. The scotch is surprisingly strong on the blockade. There wasn't a need to put extra yard on it. So be careful when they put it and stick on there very quickly, and you might not be able to peel it off without them the sheet. Cleaning it up really well. Be careful, read it easy (learned the hard way). By the way, it's not real glass. It's in plexiglas. Aaand.... all done! Quick, easy, and cheap small case display cutter. Love this? Comb it in your table! Please follow & Disclosure: A cutter display case is ideal for display in your knife collection without making it easy accessible to witness. A display case, sometimes called a shade box, is a shaped box structure, often including wood, and a key side showing witnesses what's inside. These are secured in the box to prevent changes, allowing you to hang the pieces on a wall. Preparation Determines an appropriate size so the display case is the first step in the building process. You can determine an appropriate size by setting out your knife collection in the exact design you want it to appear. The design knives do not need to be in a perfect square shape or rectangular, but keep in mind that the box will be a square or rectangle, so adjust accordingly. When you have the knives in the location you want, measuring around four locations will help you pick up the size of the screen display you need. Traditional screens in stores or museums are made of glass, but you can choose a clear plastic. Because the display screen will need to be stuck on a frame, measuring at least a couple of inches outside on all four locations. This dimension is the top and bottom measurement for the display case. Bipartisan measurements are determined by the thickness of the knives. The box would be at least a half an inch larger than the thick knife in the display. If the knives are heavy, consider using a thick piece of plumber instead of thin strips of plywood. The wooden planks have sighting surfaces that will allow you to paint, spot or finish the final product the way you choose. The frame that holds the transparent chunk should be constructed first. You can use strips of wood or even piece picture frames with the dimensions you need to build the frame. Sticks of rainbow or thin nails are excellent to hold the pieces together in their corners. Building the box with attaching the frame is the next step. Hinge attachments are ideal for attaching one side of the frame to one side of the box, because the allowed pieces of frame are balanced open. Ice pack holders are perfect for tight corners as well as the locations of the transparent pieces of the frame. Heavier in transparent pieces, those with the more ice you need to use. Knife Attachment If you plan to hang it, attach the knife to the back of the display case after the case is constructed; this will help prevent the knives from switching. You have a variety of options to keep the knives in place including large coupons, nails and thick strings. Large stamp wrapped around the knife and pierced in the back of the display case, nail sitting on both sides of the knife and kept it in place with a thick cord wrapped around knife with threads in two holes at the back of the display case to be tied to the back. All methods are suitable for keeping the knives in good condition. Additional consideration An soft match for knives to rest on leathery viewing cases in the display case, as well as further protect the condition of the knives. If you plan to hang the case, you will need a subject that you can pierce and attach to the hardware. Source: Home-Museum.com.
