On Tuesday, the San Marcos Unified School Board voted next month to begin bringing back the youngest students. This was the latest in a series of North County counties to approve plans for the phased reopening of school campuses. Vista, Poway, Oceanside and the Escondido Union recently announced plans this month for students to reopen campuses to small groups, the person's learning spreading weeks later. But those early returns are likely to be delayed if the county falls to the most restrictive level of the state's reopening system. An increase in COVID-19 cases among San Diego State University students is lower, leaving the state's red layer on the purple layer pushing the county. If so, schools that have already not reopened would lose their chance to do so, the California Department of Public Health said last week. Some local school leaders said they were quick until they got new orders. According to the latest figures, the state will announce on Tuesday which ranks the districts are in. Carlsbad Unified approved a re-opening plan a week ago for preschool education from the week of September 28 to sophomore year, with special education and school openings from the week of October 5 to fifth grade. In addition, next week, a further education for secondary and high schools will be discussed. Carlsbad Superintendent Ben Churchill said these plans are still ongoing. Our primary schools will reopen a hybrid model on September 28th, Churchill said. We have not seen a written change in public health order; therefore, we are committed to this date and will continue to implement our safe reopening plan unless otherwise guided by the state or county. Acting San Marcos Unified Superintendent Tiffany Campbell said Friday that she is keeping out more information about the county's COVID-19 situation before changing the county's recently approved plan. Zone reopening program The youngest and most vulnerable students, with transition-kindergarten and kindergarten, special education students, homeless and foster youth, and English students returning to campus from October 12. From October 19, schools would begin the rounding return of additional grade levels the following week. In-person teaching would continue with a hybrid program with two groups of students attending the class on alternate days. Middle and high school students would not return until January at the beginning of the next term. Campbell said it would be complicated to bring back secondary students because of the huge complexities with multiple course semesters and a secondary master program. We are waiting for the figures before making any decisions about getting the dates back. Said. Vista Unified School District Supervisor Matt Doyle said the county still recovers the reopening plan if it returns to the red tier relatively quickly. If the county falls to the purple layer on Tuesday, if cases of covid-19 fall again, it could return to the red zone three weeks later, on October 13. School districts later said on October 27th that education could continue in person two weeks from now. Just a week after Vista's reopening date of October 20. But if the county remains purple, it could delay back-to-school plans for much longer. If the county stays in the purple layer for a long time, then we will be tremendously affected. About 10,500 Vista students, or half of those enrolled in the county, chose a person learning model and hope to return to campus this fall, he said. Renewed school restrictions will hit these plans hard. Our teachers and staff spent hours preparing for a successful reopening. Said. We care very much about our students and want to make sure that we support their needs as students. If we fail to provide in-person learning, our students will be denied the opportunity to communicate with their teachers and other students. Daniel Morales, the mother of a third, sixth and eighth grader in the Carlsbad Unified School District, said the news was heartbreaking for parents and students waiting to return to school. Morales said he called state and local leaders and emailed them and attended a parent rally to reopen the school and called for more flexible protocols. I hope there are some legal ways they can do it, because with these new rules I don't see our schools being reopened and their places of business being reopened, and that's just devastating. Said. It is unclear how the expected change in the province's status will affect secondary schools, many of whom are not yet planned to return to study in person. The Carlsbad Unified School District has scheduled a special meeting for Wednesday. 23, to reeasse the re-plans for middle and high school. The Escondido Union High School District has not announced its reopening plan, but Superintendent Anne Staffieri said the county is negotiating with teachers and staff. We propose a slow, strict and gradual approach to reopening high school campuses based on data. Said. It is also unclear whether the renewed restrictions will halt plans to bring some students back to school in small groups for special services or education. In some districts, he had planned to open schools limited to special education students, English learners and the homeless and foster youth, and to allow some extra-curation or enrichment activities on campus. New rules banning the reopening of schools that are currently closed, but allowing reopeners to continue their person learning, could also widen educational inequalities worsened by the COVID-19 pandemic. Only a few small school districts have reopened, including Del Mar Union, Rancho Santa Fe and Cajon Valley Union. Many private schools have previously opened under disclaimers that allow them to continue their own personal education. Morales said he looks at private schools, but most have waiting lists for new students. Meanwhile, their children are struggling with virtual learning. His third-grader doesn't want to sign in to school every morning, followed by two middle school students frustrated by technical problems and internet latency in virtual classrooms. Despite the best efforts made by teachers to give online lessons, she said her children were bored, disabled and hours of screen time ran out. Fluctuate plans for the school's reopening make this even more frustrating. They're getting pretty dim and they've lost hope of getting back to school. Said.
