

Crafteman lacor trac combo kit

The Craftsman Laser Trac Level Combo Kit features a laser level, red safety glasses and metal mounting plates for different leveling situations. The entire kit is housed in a zippered case mounted in foam. The laser is red and, to improve beam visibility, a pair of red safety glasses are included: the red laser beam will stand out more clearly when you wear them. These glasses are NOT to protect the eyes from laser. So don't be stupid, never look directly into the source of the laser beam. The Laser Trac level is powered by two AA batteries. We use rechargeable, but any good Alcaline AA will be fine. Unless you are always using this device, it is probably better to remove the batteries while the unit is not in use. At the top are integrated two bubble indicators to help level the unit. There are also several mounting plates (tripod, wall) for different leveling situations. The tripod stand is actually composed of two separate plates. The lower plate has a central hole for fixing to a tripod. The upper plate has three adjustment screws for fine-tuming the laser trac layer. The Laser Trac layer has a magnetic base for easy fixing and removal. There is also a guide seatno on the plate and notches on the front and back of the layer to allow for guick laser alignment to the base. The laser trac level can also be connected directly to a pendno or drywall. The base wall mount has six steel dots integrated into the bottom. The breasts are normally retracted into the base, but pressing the red buttons will force them to protrude on the back. A piece of black plastic is included in the kit specifically to push the breasts. As with the tripod mounting plate, the wall mount also has a guide seat for guick alignment. We liked what we saw in this first circle of the craft laser trait level. The tool seems to be extremely well done and quite versatile. We look forward to putting this system in place and seeing it in action. Come back in a few weeks for our first use report. Image not available forColor: Welcome to The Garage Journal Board forums. A few weeks ago it was substantially lower. It costs $20 every few weeks. Anyway, the laser is pretty good, but having the base of the tripod separately becomes annoying when it comes to adjustments. The ultrasonic range finder is reasonably accurate but will not replace a traditional tape measure when it comes to accuracy. Also, these are not safaty glasses - all they do is make the laser easier to see. Just be aware of this because too many people think they are for safety. Also, as I said, the range finder is ultrasonic... says laser guided, but that just means there's a red laser that helps you aim. 08-04-2008, 10:41 #4 Banned registration date: March 2005 Location: Kansas Post: 9,120 Re: Sears Hot Deal of the Day - Craftsman Laser Trac Laser Combo Kit Sponsored Links (Register now to hide all ads) I got that set from my mother-in-law last Christmas, I haven't used it yet. 08-04-2008, 15:18 #5 Senior Members Membership Date: February 2005 Position: Michigan Post: 8,996 Re: Sears Hot Deal of the Day - Craftsman Laser Trac Laser Combo Kit Quote: Originally published by Stuey I Do It. $20 is not a hot deal. I took it about a month ago for $9.99. I used Wow, a red dot? Dude, it's high tech! the laser last weekend to hang some photos and it worked perfectly. The laser helped me align the height of the image on two walls (a big time s saving). As Stuey said, the ultrasonic distance researcher is not accurate but close for general purposes. I like the room volume calculation feature on it, but if you are looking for millimeter accuracy, it is better to buy a real laser measurement tool. 08-04-2008, 19:30 #7 Banned membership date: July 2007 Location: Now Departing, post NJ: 12,074 Re: Sears Hot Deal of the Day - Craftsman Laser Trac Laser Combo Kit nerd tool next 08-04-2008, 19:34 #8 Senior Member Accession Date: February 2005 Position: Michigan Post: 8,996 Re: Sears Hot Deal of the Day - Craftsman Laser Trac Laser Combo Kit Quote: Originally published by SpiderGearsMan nerd tool next Truly. Dude, it's high tech! It is a legitimate feature found on similar devices and other products such as infrared thermometer. The thing is, the way it's formulated and the way a lot of people aren't familiar with technology, too many people think it's the laser beam that magically leads to distance measurements. Too many people fall in the wool of keywords these days: nano, laser, high speed, high definition/HD, digital. | Next Thread » Publishing Rules You can't publish new threads You can't post replies You can't edit html code posts is On sponsored links (register now to hide all ads) All times are GMT -5.
