Get the guide in see Vanessa Craft. Shop Felt GeekBaby is Viking this Halloween. I'm really happy with his costume. Kind of combined between authentic and fictional attire. I knitted the hat from an available BellaKnitting.com made it for him to wear in the hospital, and that was the inspiration for the rest of the costume. I know Vikings weren't wearing horned helmets, that's one of the fictional elements. Chainmail shirt made of (I think) liquid lame. Silver on black background fabric. It also didn't require Hamling (score!). I made the wring out of some fake suede wool look like a sheer tunic under the post office. The belt is a strip of fake suede stitched around the circumference of the tunic. It's very long so it won't ride too much. In colder weather I'll put a regular white long-sleeved jumpsuit under the tunic to keep it warm, but the cape was enough to heat it up in our 60-degree weather in the evening. It's probably mostly fiction, too, but it looks good. The trousers and cape are wool - great because they're both warm and I don't need a hem. I hate the Mimings. The cape attaches to the chain's button-down shirt - I didn't want knots near his neck - and the buttons are reminiscent of the brothers who have historically served as fasties in Viking clothing. I chose the red and green colors because they were also used in Viking clothing. He doesn't have a weapon or shield because I didn't have time to make them and because GeekBaby is still too little to hold on to things. I can do some next week before Halloween, in which case I'll update this presentation. I made single poop for our Thanksgiving... I know, an amazing thing thanksgiving has!... And I decided to experiment with the money. Grandma really likes ladybuds and since she cooks most of the food, I decided to make ladybud cookies. Material: 1. All Listed in the cookie recipe on the link above to make the dough (ive copied the image from kristylynn84 for easier reference)and the edible glitter material if you want sparkling bugs 2. Cooking utensils like measuring cups, bowls, mixer, etc. 3. Candies or eye frosting. We used the pearl stuff in picture1. Follow the recipe and make the dough. 2. Separate the dough into four parts and color each part. We did red, yellow, blue and green. 3. Cool dough for 4 hours. Out of each color make 3 different sized balls. One for body, head and spots1. Slightly flatten a ball body to make the bottom flat 2. Use your fingers to do some get in the top for head 3. Place a headball in 4th. Spread the dough from the ball into the body ball to connect the head 5. Tear tiny pieces from ball spots and press them into the body to make spots 6. Arrange a ladybug on a pan to bake for 400 for 8 minutes Finish touches after baking and cool slightly, add the scattered eyes (or icing) sprinkle them with the edible glitter if you want and have fun! Enjoy!
