There are eight of them located all over Prism Island, and it acts as a stadium, with cheering The Steeds as an audience with a jumbotron that shows three hand signs and a Mario image when he wins the round. Each temple also has the Prisma Café to the right of the entrance. First you need to unlock them. Sometimes when getting a Mini Paint Star, a medallion with the Roshambo icon appears. If Mario catches it, the new temple will open. There are three rounds in each temple that the challenger must win to become the champion of that temple. Two steeds standing in front of the temple indicate how the first two opponents choose their cards, with the exception of the eighth temple. Each opponent Mario faces is one of the enemies of the game, each differs between temples. However, in the third round, instead of the enemy, Mario instead faces off against the Rock Paper Wizard if one of the story bosses has just been defeated. Koopaling or Kamek Enemy Card and 1000 coins are earned by defeating the Rock Paper Wizard at every opportunity (replica thing cards and 1000 coins if it was the enemy). When he's defeated in all eight temples, the Rock Paper Wizard reveals he's retiring and takes off his hat, so everyone knows he was Toad. Mario and Huey leave the temple and find out that there were actually eight Rock Paper Wizards. Rock Paper Wizards' masks are seen next to the owners of each Prisma Café afterwards. If a player loses in any of the three confrontations, it is necessary to get a Mini Paint Star in order to re-enter. However, a blue toad in the left corner can smuggle Mario into the tournament for a fee. 1 Roshambo Temple #1 2 Roshambo Temple #2 3 Roshambo Temple #3 4 Roshambo Temple #4 5 Roshambo Temple #5 6 Roshambo Temple #6 5 7 Temple of Roshambo #7 8 Temple of Roshambo #8 9 Gallery 10 Names in other languages 11 Temple trivia Roshambo #1[edit] Since the dawn of time warriors have gathered here to fight, wandering from distant lands for the chance of eternal glory. Windows 7 Home Premium SP1 (on Lenovo C1H61M v1.0 MB since 2011'ish) sees and I can copy files to / from it. But Kingston SSD Toolbox messages: No connected to the system I also appeared on the Kingston support site this: The toolbar will not see my drive. States:No SandForce drives found or No Kingston drives found. How am I going to figure this out? If your computer is an Intel-based computer, you may need to disable the Intel RST driver and go back to the default Microsoft AHCI driver, and then run the toolbar. On an AMD-based system, the AMD AHCI driver can block a toolkit. The Windows AHCI driver must be loaded. To do this, right-click the computer and choose Manage. Go to IDE ATA 5 2 I enabled Bitlocker for full partition/disk encryption on my drive a few days ago (it took a few hours to reach 99.9% completion). This section contains only a few GB of data (which Windows 10 programs do not need access to). Since then, after I shut down/restart my computer and unlock that drive, the progress bar window appears again and always stops at 99.9%. Bitlocker lock mechanism seems to be working properly, ie. Is that normal behavior? What are the remaining 0.1% that are left to encrypt? Can I fix this without deactivating Bitlocker? windows-10 bitlocker disk-encryption shar 0 I plan to use Metis to draw some networks and graphs using Python 2.7. I downloaded Metis from here. I compiled and installed the source code without any problems. To install the Python package, I followed the instructions given here, but when I run the command easy_install like: $easy_install metis I get this error: RuntimeError: Can not find METIS dll. Set the environment variable METIS_DLL the full path. From the second link above, I understand that I need to specify the full path to some metis shared library file in the METIS_DLL environment. But I don't know what the file is called and where it is located, or how I should specify a path in a variable environment. According to my research on Google, I found that the file could be called &# &#
