Image: kali9/E+/Getty Images High school memories are usually about new friends, dance prom or homecoming and, of course, learning those tough exams. Do you remember much about things like mathematics, history, science and English? Some of these things may have seemed pointless back in the day, but they are very important in shaping us all into well-rounded people. In other words, it's not about remembering specific formulas, historical dates or a composite word (although this may be convenient in the future). High school is about using that smart brain for you to figure out problems creatively and logically. And, in terms of complex things, you probably remember advanced classes like chemistry, physics, computing and biology, which required stretching the brain muscles and using those extracurricular hours to help with homework! But what does it mean to finish high school? Is it all about getting good grades, or is it really about becoming a competent person who will succeed in a future career? There is no right or wrong answer to this, but nevertheless it is something to ponder. So if you're wondering if you want to pass high school today, take this education guiz now!
