Founded by Pasquale Rotella, it is best known as the organizer of the Electric Daisy Carnival electronic music festival (EDC). Alongside EDC, Insomniac runs electronic music events Beyond Wonderland and Nocturnal Wonderland, as well as drum and bass and dubstep-oriented events under the Bassrush brand, hardstyle events under the Basscon brand, and trance events under the Dreamstate brand. Insomniac is also involved in the operation of three Los Angeles>Create nightclubs (in collaboration with SBE, built in the former Vanguard Hollywood area), Exchange L.A.[4][5] and the Underground Warehouse Factory 93, located at 1756 Naud Street. [6] [7] In 2013, Insomniac entered into a creative partnership with Live Nation, and in 2014, introduced a co-branded record label in collaboration with Interscope Geffen A&M. Overview and collaborations Unlike other promoters, Insomniac places greater emphasis on fan experiences during its events, as opposed to focusing on profits and ticket sales , and that our strength lies in the movement as a whole. It's a culture. It's powerful. It's always been about the people in attendance. It changes people's lives. [8] [9] Rotella has argued that music festivals do not require big acts selling out arenas, going so far as to praise the burning man for being an event by people for people where organizers just provide an open space and people all go outside. [10] In June 2013, Insomniac announced a series of collaborations; including one with Dick Clark Productions to produce a dance music awards show, and a major creative collaboration with Live Nation that will allow Insomniac to benefit from the resources of Live Nation while maintaining autonomy and creative control over its events. Although the details of the agreement were not disclosed, the stressed that the deal was not a takeover, as he had speculated. [6] [9] [11] Since 1993,[12] Insomniac has produced over 2,000 festivals attended by over 5 million people. [13] In August 2015, Pasquale announced his new radio show, Night Owl Radio, on SiriusXM's Electric Area[14] (the Electric Area was later replaced by Diplo's Revolution in 2018). [15] In in the summer of 2018, Insomniac Radio launched on SiriusXM's 730 channel. [16] In May 2019, Insomniac partnered with Dash Radio as its flagship station. [17] In response to the COVID-19 pandemic (which led to the postponement of all facial festivals), Insomniac began to flow a rotation of sets from previous editions of EDC, HARD Summer, and Okeechobee festivals on Its YouTube and Twitch channels under the Insomniac Rewind banner, as well as virtual festivals tied to its festival brands. [18] [19] [20] [21] At the end of 2020, insomniac launched a residence of drive-in Park 'N Rave concerts at the NOS Events Center in San Bernardino,[22] and announced a drive-through audiovisual experience event known as the Electric Mile in Santa Anita Park - which will feature facilities divided into worlds inspired by its main festival brands.
