This article or section requires a cleanup to meet the Old School RuneScape Wiki's quality standards. You can edit this page to improve it. This article gives tips on training Smithing. Edit Source | Image source] Levels 1–37: Seeking/Modifying Source] Completion of The Knight's Sword, Elementary Workshop I and II. The Giant Dwarf, Heroes' Quest and Pirate Pete subquest of Recipe for Disaster will grant a total of 30,982 experience, increasing Smithing from level 1 to level 37. Players will then have to make 50 iron plate bodies to get level 40 Smithing, where they can start smelling gold bars in the Blast Oven. Completing The Knight's Sword is highly recommended as it gives 12,725 Smithing experience upon completion, immediately raising Smithing from level 1 to level 29. Levels 1–40: Anvil smithing edit | Edit source] From levels 1 to 40, the fastest experience is gained by smithing multiple items at the amprive just south of the west Varrock bank. Players should make the highest level item available, since higher equal items require more than one bar to make, fewer actions will be needed and this will lead to more experience per hour. This will result in a loss, but the overall loss is relatively small than reaching level 40 will take just under an hour. The table below shows the items and materials needed to reach level 40. While there are some items that are potentially cheaper to make, these low-level items are uncommonly traded on the Grand Exchange and their prices vary greatly. Players who want to save money should do guests who give Smithing experience to skip most of the early levels. This method costs money, and it can be quite expensive depending on the Grand Exchange pricing. Players will need to have family Crest completed for goldsmith gauntlets for this method, which increases the base experience from 22.5 to 56.2 experience per gold bar. Without the gauntlets, this method is not worth doing, since it would be much more expensive and much slower. Players will also need to have level 50 Mining and the Queen once for ice gloves. Stamina drinks are also mandatory for optimal experience rates, and it is also highly recommended to have some weight-reducing clothing to reduce the walked energy drain. Wearing a ring of endurance with costs is also recommended. To access Keldagrim, players should have started The Giant Dwarf quest. Players can get to the Blast Oven by using the minigame teleport there or using the mine cart from the Grand Exchange to Keldagrim. While on an official Blast Furnace world, dwarfing NPCs will keep the oven running for a fee, see below for a breakdown. Under level 60, the Blast Oven Foreman will require a payment every 10 minutes to be able to use the oven. Players can get up to about 380,000 experience per hour at maximum efficiency with this method. Without goldsmith gauntlets, players can only get up to about 150,000 experience per hour. At level 99 it is possible to gain up to 400 000–420 000 experience per hour when wearing the Smithing Cape. To achieve the maximum experience figures, all of the following points must be considered (in order of priority): Wear goldsmith gauntlets when the experience is earned for melting the gouderts. The experience will be earned about 3 seconds after ore has gone at the belt for an empty dispenser. Use ice gloves to save a stock space for more golden ore. Wear weight-reducing clothing. Keep stamina drinks in the bank. When running energy gets low, drink a dose of a stamina canvassing of the sofa at the same time you collect gouderts (right-click and drink in the banking interface). Set the bank transfer quantity on Everyone to quickly retrieve a full inventory of gouderts from the bank and deposit gold bars from your inventory with a single left-wing click on the respective materials. Optionally, fill the bank with bank fillet via the bank menu so you can use the deposit inventory option to deposit only your braked gold bars into your bank with one click. For that to work properly, there cannot be a placeholder for the Goldsmith gauntlets or Ice Gloves. The 'Deposit Worn Items' button can be hidden via the bank menu so worn gear isn't accidentally deposited in the bank. 231,268 golden ore is required to reach level 99 of level 40 when using the goldsmith gauntlets. Training with gold bars costs -1.49 per experience when training on one of the official worlds, using goldsmith gauntlets and drinking 40 stamina doses per hour. Exclusively training via gouderts from level 40 to 99 will result in a loss of -19,409,211.97 after selling the created gold bars. Other methods edit source] The other training methods below are much slower than smelling gold bars at the Blast Oven. Using them becomes only for skill purely that can't get goldsmith gauntlets, since without the gauntlets that smell gold bars will offer much lower Tariffs. Regular accounts that want to save money to do cheaper methods are generally better off simply smelling gold bars and using the save time to make money in other ways. However, sometimes a certain method can be viable in terms of cost depending on the Grand Exchange prices. For aamboo smithing methods, the closest aamil to a bank is in the Trahaearn district of Prifddinas. Players who have not completed Song of the Elves should use the aammel just south of the western Varrock bench. The experience figures for aamboo smithing depend on the type of metal that is smithed and number of bars used per item. The following table shows the calculated experience per hour of each type of metal bar at how many pubs are used per item, assuming an optimal 11 tick bank time, as possible at the southeastern Prifddinas bank. The cost and level requirements can be checked using the Smithing tables. XP/h ranked by # of bars used per item # of bars used 1 bar 13.9k 27.7k 41.6k 55.5k 69.3k 83.2k 2 bar 25.7k 51.3k 77.0k 102.6k 128.3k 153.9k 3 bars 36.2k 72.3k 108.5k 144.6k 180.8k 217.0k 5 bars 52.1k 104.2k 156.2k 208.3k 2 260.4k 312.5k Levels 15–99: Blast Oven[edit source] Fuselage bars (except gold or silver) at the Blast Furnace provide slow experience, but it usually offers decent profit. With the ice gloves and coal bag, it is highly recommended to significantly increase the number of bars created per hour. Players will also need weight-reducing clothing and stamina drinks to always run energy. Optimal bar patterns can be found on the Blast #Bar Patterns page. These numbers assume that you are using one of the official worlds, ice gloves, and 36 stamina doses per hour. Player must have completed the Tourist trap to be able to smith arrow tips. 10 arrow tips were created per bar. Keep in mind that the 'coins by experience' calculations are based below on buying the bars at the Grand Exchange. The list below assumes 9,500 arrow tips are made per hour. Players should smith the highest level platebody they can, from steel plates at level 48, move to mithril at level 68 and then be determined at level 88. From level 66 to 68, players can plateau mithril or plateau maize as a slightly slower but cheaper alternative to steel plate bodies. Depending on the Grand Exchange prices, melting gold bars at the Blast Furnace may be cheaper than smithing lower-level weapons, and it offers much faster experience per hour. However, Adamant plates can be a viable option for some players as they offer decent experience figures and they are usually very cheap. Players will have to have level 99 to be able to make these items, but dwarf stouts or their adult versions can be used to provide a boost for that level. But because of the high cost of Dwarven naughty(m), players can expect a big loss when using that method. Each of these items delivers the same amount of experience, so players have to make whatever offers the best profit. Players can also throw high level Alchemy to increase profits, but it is only recommended if you have a very disposable gold and plan on skill while alchemizing.
