Frankie fun park columbia sc laser tag

Go carts. Laser tag. Giant video games. bumper boats. Nacho cheese sounds like a dream world for an eight-year-old (at least, my 8-year-old son!) as he describes Frankie's fun garden, a child-friendly destination if there is ever one. It is also an absolute explosion for adults who take these children there. We went straight to the go carts when we visited the site in Columbia (Frankie Fun Gardens also found in Charleston and Greenville). There are three tracks, one for younger children aged 4-10, a spot track for adults and older teenagers only, and a standard track for all ages (you can drive on your own if you are over 54 inches tall; younger children can ride as a rider). It's a great cycle, full of twists and curves. Even after you have had your driver's license for over 20 years, there is still something exciting about driving a kart going as fast as you can go around turn hairpin. There is also something exciting, but in a completely different way, about watching the shock and joy in your child's face as he presses the accelerator for the first time and realizes he is driving. This was the first time my son was tall enough to drive alone. I've caused only three wrecks the first time my husband promised in the future go driving card lessons. Also outside are bumper boats (to be ready to get soaked), slice potato bag (great for younger kids to do with a parent), batting cages, and beautiful mini golf with many different courses. There is also a drop area, a ride that lifts you into the air to drop you over and over again - like the first hill on a roller coaster 10 times in a row. As your stomach settles to where it belongs to your abdomen, you are dropped again. When we went inside, my husband and son went straight to the laser mark, while my daughter ran to a giant playing structure called Fun House, with tunnels to crawl through, ladders to climb, and slides down. I stayed there for more than an hour, while the rest of us went to the miniature bowling lanes, shrinking the cross between the 10-pin bowling and the candle to half the normal size. By the time they made the arcade, full of huge video games, some you can walk in or sit in, I couldn't help but sit stunned by all the flashing lights and music and eat fried cheese. There is enough variety in the activities that my two very different children (as well as their very different parents) both had a lot of fun. We easily spent the whole afternoon there and had to pull the children away. They would have stayed for another four hours, but my husband and I were dealing with sensory overload at that point. The children started talking about our next visit before we got in the car. We spent about 2 hours here and saw 3 things: (1) a video game arcade which was my favorite less (overly stimulating and noisy). (2) Fun House - which was amazing and even suitable for 3-5 year old children. (3) Race track - the children were sitting next to their parents - a lot of fun. All in all, we had a great time, worth the money (the exception, again, is the corridors). The toilets were acceptable. Acceptable.
