The owner of another Etsy store (and brick-and-mortar location), Stacy Verdick Case, said today that most of Peony Lane Designs' vintage Tupperware pieces sell for between $4 and $20. TODAY notes that many Tupperware items sell for about $2 originally. Case recommends hitting garage sales to try to find items in great condition that can sell for more. Not sure if this is an authentic piece of Tupperware? Look out for a two-part number stamped on the item, and make sure you can see the word Tupperware somewhere. Some of the most popular vintage Tupperware products are the Crystal color because Tupperware continues to make replacement lids in that particular shade, Case said TODAY. The midcentury Millionaire collection with pink, green, and blues is also popular, as well as salt and pepper shakers that have atomic stands. Case believes that these particular items are still popular likely due to a mix of nostalgia for those who remember using the old Tupperware when they were growing up and the fact that these pieces are still functional. If you're in the market for Tupperware but don't actually want vintage containers, Tupperware's website has a Classics section with simply designed items that are reminiscent of the original pieces. Otherwise, Etsy or eBay have vintage Tupperware galore! This content is imported from {embed-name}.
