Photo: Terry Vine / DigitalVision / Getty Images Spelling in Spanish can be trickier than in English. For example, el means the, but él means him. Accents aside, whole consonants and vowels are pronounced differently, and if you don't know the rules, it's hard to guess the spelling of the word. Pronunciation by pronunciation can take you in the wrong direction. Do you know what the letter J sounds like in Spanish? You'll do it by the end of this quiz. What about two RS's in a row? After mastering the verb's time forms and gendered nouns, you decided to try a new language: why not Spanish? You opened your textbook and ... Wait a minute. Isn't this Italian? Why these two languages So much like that? Because both are rooted in Latin, which was the working language of the Roman Empire. After the collapse of the empire in the 4th century, previously occupied countries such as Italy and Spain naturally developed several dialects. According to some estimates, the italian's existence has been traced back to the 14th century, when dante Alighieri, a poet known for divine comedy, noted that Italy probably contained more than 1,000 dialects. At the same time, Spanish stems from the Castile dialect, which was born in the 9th century. When the kingdoms of Castile and Leon merged with the kingdoms of Aragon in the 15th century, Spain declared Castile its official language, and Spanish eventually evolved from there.
