It is his armor made of... Dragon bones? For the gods, what I would do for a set of this. —Hold Guard[src] Dragonplate Armor is heavy armor found in The Elder Scrolls V: Skyrim. Locations[edit | edit source] From level 40, you can find pieces of dragonplate armor, very rarely, as random loot of chests and containers. The pieces of armor can be found at lower levels if the dragon's armor is acquired before reaching level 40. Enchanted Dragon Plate armor pieces can be found from level 41. Smithing[edit] Dragonplate Armor is forged from dragon bones, dragon scales and leather strips. The Dragon Armor advantage, which requires a smithing skill of 100, must be acquired before this type of armor can be made. Dragonplate Armor can be upgraded at a workbench. However, the garment and chest shield require the dragon's bones to be updated, while boots, gloves and helmets require dragon ladders. Comparisons[edit source] Daedric Armor[edit | edit source] The daedric armor has a higher armor rating than the Dragonplate armor at its base value and retains its highest rating, even when both armor have been upgraded to legendary status. However, with its lowest weight, Dragonplate Armor is the most appropriate choice when it does not have the advantages of adequate heavy armor. Another consideration is that the relative frequency of dragon attacks compared to Daedra encounters means that it is generally much easier to obtain the raw materials for dragonplate armor (bone and scales) versus daedric armor (Daedra Hearts). Also note that the higher rating for daedric armor won't make a difference if either set is taken over the armor cap of 567 through perks and tempering. Dragonscale Armor[edit | edit source] While dragonplate armor has higher base armor, it also has a much heavier weight compared to Dragonscale. Dragon ladders are also lighter than dragon bones, making it easier to transport the material for armor. Dragonscale is lightweight armor, which can do better for a stealth-based player character or if they have a higher light armor skill. However, if weight is not a problem and all heavy armor skills are unlocked, Dragonplate is a more beneficial option. Track attributes[edit | edit source] Gallery[edit | edit source]] Edit Source] The bands have dragon lyrics carved into them reading Jonah Lobe. Jonah Lobe was the character artist who created the dragonplate armor. [1] The back of the boots is quite similar in appearance on the back of the men's version of The Old Boots of the North. Zurin Arctus was known to have made a Battleship of Dragon Bones, similar to this armor. Errors[edit | edit source] This section contains errors related to Armor (Skyrim Set). If the error is still occurring, please publish the bug report with the appropriate system template 360/XB1, PS3/PS4, PC/MAC, NX , depending on the platforms on which the error was found. Smithing[edit] Dragonscale Armor is forged with dragon scales, iron ingots and leather strips. The advantage of dragon armor must be acquired before this type of armor can be made. The advantage requires a Smithing level of 100. Versus Glass[edit] Dragonscale Armor has a higher armor rating than glass armor, but a higher weight. Once updated, the dragonscale armor remains with a higher rating, but still only for about 8, making weight difference a problem, and that the full set of dragon scale weighs less than the chest plate of iron armor. It should be noted, however, that with the correct advantages invested in Light Armor, the weight difference between dragonscale armor and glass armor will be negligible, and the will have a much higher armor rating. The UESPWiki - its source for The Elder Scrolls since 1995 dragon elements are high quality armor and DG weapons made from dragon parts. Dragon armor come in dragonscale lightweight armor and heavy dragonplate armor varieties. Dragon weapons are added by the Dawnward add-on, and require it to be installed. Dragon elements can be drawn up if the player has the advantage of dragon armor, the ultimate advantage in Smithing's advantage tree. Unlocking it requires a smithing skill of 100 and all the advantages in light armor or heavy armor branches of the perk tree. Note that unlocking this advantage does not allow you to travel through the other armour branch, for example, if you unlock Glass Smithing and then Dragon Armor, you can't unlock Daedric if you don't already have Ebony Smithing. The advantage of dragon armor also allows you to improve the elements of the dragon twice as much. This advantage applies to both not delighted and delighted (generic or custom), provided that the perk arcane Ferrer has been unlocked. Dragonscale Armor[edit] Dragonscale is the best lightweight armor in the base game. It appears on lists levelled from level 46 (varieties sung at level 47). However, even after level 46, dragonscale armor is twenty times less likely to appear than other types of armor. All elements can be tempered using 1 sample of dragon scales, and having the Dragon Armor perk doubles the quality improvement. It appears on lists levelled from level 40 (varieties sung at level 41). However, even after level 40, dragonplate armor is twenty times less likely to appear than other types of armor. Either the dragon's ladders or dragon bone are used to temper the armor: 1 dragon bone is needed to temper the battleship and shield. 1 Dragon Ladders is necessary to temper the boots, gloves and helmet. Having the perk dragon armor doubles the quality improvement. Although dragonplate armor has a lower base armor rating than Daedric, the difference in base armor rating is not always significant. A complete set of Type of armor can provide a character with a armor rating far beyond the 567 displayed armor rating needed to achieve the armor cap by applying the correct combination of heavy armor advantages, Fortify Heavy Armor enchantments while wearing the armor, armor, the use of enchanted gears and potions of Fortify Smithing while improving armor. At this point, the lighter weight of dragonplate (79 vs. 96) can make it more attractive than Daedric (unless it has the conditioning advantage or starstone capacity, both make the weight equipped zero). In addition, materials used to make dragonplate armor are generally available in larger quantities than water armor. Note that making the profit from dragon armor uses the same number of total Smithing benefits as the benefit of water armor, if you take the left branch of the Smithing Tree. Another benefit of dragon plate armor is whether you usually wear light armor for yourself, centered on the left side of the perk Smithing tree, and want to make powerful heavy armor for your followers, or do the reverse. If you're smithing Dragonplate Armor for profit, consider making Dragonplate Cuirasses, and then tempering them with a dragon bone to increase value.
