Ceramic Tile feet 1x2 Pinetrees, 18 inches long (4) A tiled patio table will add a lot of character to your outdoor living space. You can build one in a single weekend, and the project requires only a moderate amount of construction experience. The steps listed below will show you how to build a tiled patio table with an external oak finish. Step 1 - The DesignThe table will be approximately 27 inches high, with 1x4 pieces of oak running around the outer edge. Four oak poles support a plywood base that has tiles embedded on top of it. To provide extra support, you'll add 1x2 pine strips to the bottom edges of the plywood, giving the table more stability to support the weight of the tiles. Center the 1x2 pieces on each side of the plywood. Nail directly through the plywood at the narrow edge of the pine wood, keeping the piece aligned with the outer edge of the plywood. Align the first piece of 1x4 with a corner of the plywood, and attach it to the table by nailing directly through the pine supports. For best results, add a line of wood glue where the 1x4 asses against the plywood. Before attaching it, make sure that the oak sides extend 1/4 inch around the plywood. This forms the edge of the area where the tile will be inserted. The second piece of 1x4 will hit against the pending edge of the first, and flush against the edge of the table. Repeat for the remaining two sides of 1x4 oak. Step 3 - The Legs of the BaseAdd Table to the top of the tiled patio table. Each leg should be placed in a corner of the table. Fix the legs nailing directly through the 1x4 oak, and a single nail pushed down through the top of the table to the leg. If the table does not get level, sand or plan the long legs until all the legs feel firmly on the floor. Step 4 - The Tile Tile LayoutApply to the plywood top of the table in a thin layer. Place the tiles in the chosen pattern, taking care to keep them in place. Apply grout. Apply tile to set for at least 24 hours. Step 5 - Finish the woodUse a fine sandpaper to sand the exposed wood surfaces. Apply the stain to complement the color of the tiles. If any stains are on the tiles, clean it immediately. Immediately, spray lacquer to seal the wood. A tiled patio table is heavier than most other types of tables. To prevent it from scratching the patio, you may need to install small pieces of carpet or other fabric on the bottom of each leg. The playful tile treatment on this DIY patio table turns the humble garden accent into a bespoke treasure. The lightweight table frame comes along with pine boards supported by four sections of 2x4 wood. As for the tile table, it can be recreated with individual tile and grout —or with a few bargain wall tile sheets, for an unaccompanied alternative.
