He is now dead K-pop group Fin.K.L. Introduced his entertainer in 1998 as a member of . Sang turned to acting in 2002, starring in television dramas such as Thousand Years of Love (2003), Ice Queen (2006), Hong Gil Dong (2008), and Feast of the Gods (2010). Early life and education Sung was born in 1981 in Fubinzen, Baden-Württemberg, West Germany. His father Sung Jong-hyun, a professor of theology at Presbyterian College and the Theological Seminary, was studying in West Germany at the time. Sung's family returned to South Korea when she was four years old and grew up in Seoul's Gangdong district. He attended Myung Elementary and Middle School, high school named Kwang and graduated from Kyung Hee University with The Post Modern Music Major in 2005. Career when Sang was a high school student, he began his entertainment career in 1998 as the youngest member of the four-member K-pop girl group Fin.K.L (which stood for fine-killing Liberty), one of the first Korean idol groups. [1] Fin.K.L quickly rose in popularity, releasing four albums (Blue Rain (1998), White (1999), Now (2001), Eternity (2002)), and various singles, live concert albums and compilation albums. But after the release of their fourth album, Sung and fellow band members Oak Joo-hyun, Lee Hui-ri and Lee Jin began doing solo activities. [2] Sung made his acting debut in 2002 with Bad Girls and was cast a year later in his first leading role in Thousand Years of Love (2003). Sung learned horseback riding and martial arts in her role as a Baekje princess who travels to modern-day South Korea in time. [3] This romantic comedy was followed by the first love of a royal prince (2004), partly shot in Japan and Bali, in which Sung's fun-loving sandwich shop delivery girl was one From her previous feminine characters. [4] During this time, she was harshly criticized for her act. [5] [6] [7] Sung graduated from

Kyung Hee University in February 2005 with a degree in theatre and film; He also received an achievement award for promoting his alma mater. [8] Fin.K.L. in late 2005 After a brief return to music through digital single Corealism, she decided to focus solely on her acting career. In line with this, all Finkel members left their agency DSP Entertainment, and Sung joined SidusHQ in June 2005. In 2006, she starred in a fine day and ice queen, playing respectively, an orphan adopted by a wealthy but suffocating family, and a cold-hearted heiress with an incurable illness. But it was the fusion period dramedy Hong Gil-dong in 2008 that changed how the industry was regarded as an actress sung. The series' screenwriters, The Hong Sisters, were initially criticized for casting her, but they defended Sang, and her portrayal of a tomboyish, vanity-free robber drew a positive reception from the audience. [9] Sang then played an aspiring show director who joins Cirque du Soleil in Sun Swallow, a 2009 big-budget action series romanced with shooting exotic locations in Las Vegas and South Africa. [10] That same year, she also appeared in her first big screen starring role as a Korean-American adoptee who returns to her native country to perhaps search for her biological mother in (titled Rabbit and Lizard in Korean). [6] [11] [12] [13] [14] In 2011, Sung left SidusHQ and moved to King Kong Entertainment. [15] [16] She then starred in Romance City, in the role of a maid who wins ₩14 billion in the lottery and keeps it a mystery with the help of her boss and partner home. [17][18] [19] Two of the Korean royal court cuisines followed with the feast of the gods (2012) about rival female chefs another traditional melodrama. [7] [20] [21] [22] [23] Later, Sang last reunited on screen with Hong Gill-Dong co-star Kong Ji-Hwan's action comedy film Runway Police, which revolves around a detective who goes undercover as a fashion model for a drug case. [24] [25] [26] [27] In 2013, he played a genius with psychological amnesia in the mystery of birth. [28] [29] Low-budget indie sister of a boy was then released, in which Sung played the titular character who is grieving after his brother's death. [30] [31] Later that year, he replaced Han Hi-Jin as one of the hosts of the talk show Healing Camp, you're not happy. [32] [33] When Sung's contract with King Kong Entertainment expired in January 2014, he signed with Fantagio. [34] He then appeared for free in the short film Chorogi and The Predator Man which appeared at the 6th Seoul International Extreme-Short Image and Film Festival (SESIFF). [35] Sung is the next a diva actress who unexpectedly omnibus the 2015 Falls for his loyal manager in the snow played. [36] [37] On April 20, 2015, Sung signed a special contract with SL She starred in The Next Revenge Melodrama Monster. [39] [40] Private Life Sung married golfer Ahn Sung-hyun in a low-key private ceremony in May 2017. They had been dating for four years and didn't publicly announce their wedding until after the ceremony.
