Scroll accuracy and control have been improved, and there are fixed cases of unexpected scroll acceleration. Various security fixes Microsoft OneNote: Salva adee e organica note 16.0.13530.20004 Microsoft Corporation Mozilla has been working on a redesigned Firefox based on almost completely rewrite code for a year and has actually already released updates to its stable channel. But despite being available through the Play Store for a few people, most of Firefox for Android users is still in version 68, which was first re-released in version 68 in 2019. Mozilla has finally announced that it wants to change it and will begin rolling out the rewrite release of Firefox widely to everyone, but beware: you will lose access to most of the add-ons in the update process. We have already complained of a lack of extended support when the browser stabilizes at the end of July, and things haven't changed since then. You can still access a small selection of extensions in the first place, namely uBlock Origins, Dark Reader, HTTPS Everywhere, Privacy Badger, NorthScript Security Suite, Distributed Eves, Search by Image, YouTube High Definition, Privacy Possum. at least mozilla promise We are constantly working to provide more additional features from the old Firefox will be made into a new version starting with v80, currently in beta. You can view websites you've visited before by pressing and holding the back button as you can in Chrome. This only works when you use the button navigation system (no long presses for Android 10 + back gestures), or if you press your browser's own back button. Coming to you with version 80 (currently in beta): Press and hold the button again for recording. Besides that, the new browser has received some significant improvements compared to v68. There's a new UI with top or bottom bar and dark mode support for users to choose from, improved privacy in the form of third-party cookies and content blocking, and a number of optimizations under the hood that should make web browsing much faster. All New Firefox will be widely released in Europe (specifically in Germany, France and the UK) in Europe on August 25 and North America on August 27. Usage data, such as search history and bookmark minus extensions, is automatically migrated, but if you set a master password, you must first disable it to keep saved logins. To get your hands on version 79 now, you can also download it from apk mirror. If you're already running a new release and want to roll back to a version that supports all Firefox add-ons, v68, you can catch it in the APK Mirror, too. It is no longer seem to find a direct download for Firefox Mobile for Android. When you visit the Mozilla page, the only APK you can see for download is firefox cla apk. Can anyone else find another google play I can find a generic application? I would really like to use my adblocker again.. Hello all of page 2 7 comments, I use lenaageOS and there is no Google service installed to try and maintain some similarity of privacy. I'm looking for a direct apk file so I can install it without Google. Does anyone know the location? Thanks page 2.6 comments comments
