Although today's NRA is focused on protecting citizens' gun rights, the organization has begun with a different purpose. Its founders, two Union Army veterans, Colonel William C. Church and General George Wingate, were disturbed by the bad marksman skills of their soldiers during the Civil War. In an article published in 1871 for the Army and Navy Journal, Church wrote that the National Guard did not do enough to improve the fire of soldiers, and so, taking it as an example from an organization in Great Britain - interestingly as the National Rifle Association as too - scientifically promoting and encouraging rifle-le fever [sources: Church, NRA, Rothman]. In the same year, the American NRA was founded. Another former Union officer - General Ambrose Burnside, who also served as governor of Rhode Island and this state as a U.S. senator, became the organization's first president [source: NRA]. The following year, with the financial help of the state of New York, the NRA set up an app site at the Long Island Creed Farm. Creedmoor, called its range, became the place for the organization's first annual shooting competition. In the end, however, according to the date on the NRA's website, political opposition to target shootings forced the NRA to find a new location. In 1892, Creedmoor returned to the state and moved NRA competitions to Sea Girt, New Jersey. In the early 1900s, the NRA continued to encourage shooting, with NRA Secretary Albert S. Jones calling on universities and military academies to set up rifle clubs. The organization also had its own youth program, and in the summer of 1906, 200 boys competed in matches at Sea Girt. With increased participation in the NRA's shooting schedules, a larger facility was needed, and Camp Perry, founded by General Ammon B. Crichfield on the shores of Lake Erie in Ohio, hosted national matches today, a shooting competition with nearly 6,000 competitors at various events [source: NRA]. During World War II, as one might expect from an organization founded by army generals, the NRA played a role in the war effort, presenting its ranges to the government, encouraging the ni and members to protect defense facilities. The organization collected 7,000 firearms and sent them to Great Britain. (The NRA, due to Great Britain's gun control laws, after War I and II, the NRA shifted its focus on security training and training for hunters. In 1949, it worked with the state of New York to establish its first hunter training program, and similar programs were pursued in the United States and Canada. In 1960, the NRA also launched a firearms trainer certification program for police officers, and in 2018 Nationwide NRA certified policy and security instructors [source: NRA]. In the end, however, the NRA stands out even more with its political activism. Walser Wealth Management CEO Rebecca Walser and "Follow the Action" podcast host John Layfield discuss Californians who voted for Joe Biden but are not in favor of raising state taxes, and how Biden's COVID-19 lockdown plans could affect the economy. President-elect Joe Biden's $1.9 trillion rescue plan, released Thursday, is calling for three key tax improvements to the income spectrum for 2021 that will help Americans. Technology stocks could come under pressure as President-elect Joe Biden's stimulus plan moves through the U.S. economy. We all heard you caught the early chick worm. Well, about the early investor captures victory. What are the fastest growing stocks to watch in The Investor's Business Newspaper 2021? Here is a listing that includes GRWG stock, Square, Daqo and four other stocks expecting 156% growth. Raymond James strategist Tavis McCourt, who monitors markets on the main chance, sees both risk and opportunity in current market conditions. This opportunity, according to him, stems from obvious factors: Democrats won both seats in the Georgia Senate in the last run-off, with Biden Administration majority support coming in both Congressional Legislatures - and legislation or signed in the near term, which increased the likelihood of meaningful financial support. More importantly, the coronavirus vaccine program continues, and reports suggest that the Pfizer vaccine, one of two approved in the United States, is effective against the new strain of the virus. A successful vaccination program will accelerate economic recovery, allowing states to relax lockdown regulations and get people back to work. The risks also come from political and public health realms. House of Representatives Democrats have passed impeachment clauses against President Trump despite the natural closure of his term, a transition that reduces the chances of political reconciliation in a heavily polarized state. And while the COVID strain matches existing vaccines, there is still a risk of developing a new strain that is not covered by existing vaccines – which could restart the locking cycle and economic downturn. Another risk McCourt sees, beyond these two risks, would be a sharp rise in inflation. He doesn't underestimate it, but thinks it's unlikely to happen soon. ... Product/service inflation only really reopens after a possibility, so the market feels a little bulletproof in the very near term, and so continue to rally, adding only stimulating fire fuel to the winner of the Dems GA races, McCourt noted. Among the staff of Raymond James analysts are some of McCourt's colleagues keeping these risks in mind and putting their imprimatur in strong dividend stocks. We reviewed Raymond James' recent searches and used the TipRanks database to select two stocks with high-yield dividends. These Buy-rated tickers bring a 7% dividend yield, a powerful attraction for investors interested in using the good times available to build a defensive firewall if risks occur. Enterprise Product Partners (EPD) We will start in the energy sector, a business segment long known for both high cash flows and high dividends. Enterprise Products Partners is a midstream company that is part of the network that transfers hydrocarbon products from wells to storage farms, refineries and distribution points. Enterprise controls 50,000 miles worth of pipelines, shipping terminals along Texas' Gulf coast and storage facilities for 160 million barrels of oil and 14 billion cubic feet of natural gas. The company suffered from low prices and low demand in 1H20, but partially recovered in the second half. Revenue reversed and rose 27% to $6.9 billion in Q3. This was more than 6% above the Q3 forecast, absorbing a 5.4% year-on-year decline. Q3 earnings of 48 cents per share were just below forecast, but increased by 4% year-on-year and 2% in turn. EPD recently announced a distribution of 45 cents, 4Q20 dividends per common share. This was higher than the previous payment of 44 cents and the first increase in two years. At $1.80 per year, the pay yield is 7.9%. Among the bulls is Raymond James' Justin Jenkins. We meet EPD with Strong Purchase rates. The analyst gives the stock a price target of $26, implying a 15% upward trend from current levels. (Click here to watch Jenkins' record) Jenkins, supporting the bullish stance, in our view, EPD's unique combination of integration, balance sheet strength and ROIC track record remain best in its class. We see EPD as arguably the best positioned to withstand the volatile landscape... With EPD's footprint, demand gains, project growth and contract ramps more than balancing their winds and lower y/y marketing results... Not. Not. Analysts all agree on the stock, so when it happens, take note. EPD's Strong Buy consensus rating is unanimously based on 9 Buy. The stock's average price target of $24.63 is $22.65, which shows a 9% reversed current share price. (See EPD stock analysis on TipRanks) AT&T, Inc. (T) AT&T is one of the immediately able shares of the market. The company is known as a longtime member of the S&P 500 and one of the stock market's top dividend payers. AT&T is a true large-scale industry giant with a market cap of $208 billion and the largest network of mobile and fixed telephone services in the U.S. It bought TimeWarner (now WarnerMedia) in an ongoing process between 2016 and 2018, thwarting the company a large stake in the mobile content streaming business. AT&T saw a decline in revenues and earnings under the pressure of the corona pandemic in 2020 - but the decline was modest, as the same epidemic also put a premium on telecoms and networking systems, which tend to support AT&T's business. Revenues in 3D20 were $42.3 billion, a 5% increase from the same quarter the previous year. On positive notes, free cash flow rose to $12.1 billion from $11.4 billion, and the company reported 5.5 million new subscriber earnings. Subscriber growth was under way by the new 5G network launch and premium content services. The company maintained its reputation as a dividend champion and issued its latest dividend statement for payment in February 2021. The pay-per-stock payment of 52 ranks fifth in a row at the current level, with an annual return of 7.2%, reaching $2.08. For comparison, the average dividend among technology sector peer companies is only 0.9%. AT&T has been keeping its dividend strong for the past 12 years. Raymond James analyst Frank Louthan sees AT&T as a classic stock of defensive value, describing T's current situation as bad news 'baked': 'Over the next 12 months, we believe there is more to at&T than can get worse for the insidy of shares, and we believe that's a good recipe. It's hard to come up with a big cap value names, and we think investors who will wait a few months for an average return and generate a 7% return should be rewarded to buyAT&T at current levels. Said. In line with these reviews, Louthan rates T is an Outperform (i.e. Buy) and its $32 price target means room for 10% growth from current levels. (Click here to watch Louthan's record) What does the rest of the street think? Looking at the consensus collapse, other analysts' views are becoming more common. 7 Purchase ratings, 6 Amounts and 2 Sales are added to the Moderate Purchase consensus. In addition, the average price target of $31.54 shows a reverse potential of -9%. Quantum A.I. is expected to help transform life as we know it. A question that navigates around the all-time high of major U.S. stock indexes and often opens up these days is whether some companies may have excessive valuations. However, some operate at the other end of the spectrum and may yet offer investors untapped deals. H.C. Wainwright analyst Ram Selvaraju points to such a company in the direction of Sorrento Therapeutics (SRNE). Selvaraju rates SRNE is a purchase along with a $30 price target, which implies 275% above current levels. (Click here to watch Selvaraju's record) What's behind the optimism perspective? For starters, Sorrento has a stake in two cell-based immunotherapy companies. Sorrento shares will be worth something in the coming months. A Celularity, a clinical stage cell therapy company focused on cellular drugs for cancer, infectious diseases, and degenerative diseases. Celularity expected to go The company's equity value, which was later merged with GX Acquisition Corp this year following the close of the Transaction through a SPAC merger, will be about $1.7 billion. Selvaraju estimates sorrento's position should be worth $200 million. The second company, NantKwest, recently signed an agreement to merge it with ImmunityBio. The transaction is expected to close at 1H21. Sorrento owns about 8.2 million shares of the clinical stage immunotherapy company. These are currently worth about $121,000,000, with NantKwest going with its final share price. In addition, the analyst highlights Sorrento's evolving portfolio of assets covering three different treatment areas (non-opioid pain management, oncology, and COVID-19). In fact, only on the Covid-19 front, Sorrento has taken a broad-based approach and there is a long list of diagnostic, prophrectic and therapeutic proposals in the pipeline, with updates likely to come fast and furious. These include two rapid detection tests; Covi-STIX, which the company applied for emergency use permit (EUA) in the U.S. in December and COVI-TRACE, which claims Selvaraju can come in handy in any mass gathering event. The 5-star analyst believes that the incentive to facilitate the large-scale and truly anywhere deployment of COVI-TRACE testing is extremely high and that governments around the world can try to implement it in their region. Said. Other Covid-19 candidates include COVIGUARD - SARS-CoV-2 neutralized antibody, COVI-AMG - a convulsive matured version of coviguard neutralized antibody, COVI-SHIELD and a neutralized antibody cocktail called COVIDTRAP, an ACE2 receptor decoy, with the aim of receptoring mammal ACE2, acting as the primary portal for sars-cov-2 virus. All rights reserved. For the second time in a week, there was big news to report on the hydrogen fuel cell company Plug Power (PLUG). Last week, as you may remember, there was a $1.5 billion alliance with Korea's FA Group to create a hydrogen economy for South Korea. This week, an agreement to build fuel cell vans in France with local partner Renault -- and alspite Plug not adding a price tag to that, investors still cheered like crazy and increased Plug shares by more than 22% in one day. As Plug announced on Tuesday, it signed a memorandum of understanding with the French carmaker. With this law, the parties were interested in establishing 50-50 joint ventures over the next six months to refuel hydrogen-fueled fuel-fueled vehicle solutions, infrastructure and services to customers in France and to seize 30% of the country's fuel cell-powered light commercial vehicles market. Renault will provide the ability to produce cars, and Plug will supply fuel cell systems to go to zoom! Plug will also produce van-fuel hydrogen fuel systems on the road. Shareholders were not pleased with Plug Power's announcement, and B. Riley analyst Christopher Souther quickly doubled his buying grade on Plug stock to issue a note, increasing his price target by more than 50% to $79 per share. (Click here to watch Souther's record) Describing Renault as a strong partner for Plug on the Continent, the local market for fuel cell-powered light commercial vehicles is expected to grow from zero today to 500,000 units by 2030. Souther long you've increased the number. You've increased it. Accordingly Plug for commercial vehicle revenues. In fact, long before 2030, 20 times the 2024 fiscal sales forecast, the plug is making a stock valuation. What exactly is this prediction? Souther didn't say it properly. But the $79 share price implies an enterprise value of just over $37 billion for Plug shares, implying that the analyst saw the new relationship with Renault push Plug's 2024 revenues upwards of $1.8 billion - roughly six times more than plug's recent revenue of $308 million. Interestingly, this estimate is nearly double the $1 billion in 2024 fiscal revenue that Plug last promised. Another interesting thing about Souther's forecasts: While Souther did not put a figure on its 2024 forecast, it also made detailed predictions of what Plug would produce in the near term and also predicted full-year 2020 sales and 2021 full-year sales. Wall Street thinks the company's revenues are only $291,000,000, contrary to the average consensus that most analysts agreed to sell for perhaps $329,000,000 last year. Similarly, consensus estimates for fiscal 2021 put Plug's sales at $444 million -- but Souther sees only $419 million. Now, it's hardly clear how Plug went from predicting disappointing results for two years to do double what Plug promised three years later. And why investors are likely to be opaque similar to their admission, sales disappointments are likely to buy plug ahead of what they are likely to buy. Then again, Souther laments himself: no matter how expensive Plug buys stock, secular tailwinds are hard to fight. B. What's Riley's opinion? The current look presents an enigma. On the one hand, based on 10 Buys and 1 Hold, the stock has a Strong Buy consensus rating. Analysts, however, expect shares to cool after going this high recently, down 18% from current levels.
