The suction cups can be a super useful option for hanging the décor (what is Halloween without the décor?!), organizers, and more. In our home, we find them especially useful in the bathroom, since the shower walls are not really conducive to other methods for hanging things. In my own shower, I have several suction cups on the walls of my shower that perform a variety of functions, from providing a place to hang loofahs to keeping Dave's shaving mirror aloft. And while we love the versatility and functionality of our suction bath accessories now, there was a time not long ago when I was at the end of my wit with them! After entering our bathroom to find Dave's shaving mirror accidentally sitting in the sink after his suction cup failed once again, I was determined to figure out how to get suction cups to stand once and for all! And thanks to the following tips I discovered during my research, I can gladly report that when it comes to all the suction cups around our house, it's been nothing but a gentle navigation ever since! :-)

So the next time you need a suction cup to stick, just follow these steps and see what a difference it makes!

How to get suction cups to stick

Choose a suitable surface

The ideal surface to apply a suction cup is that clean, flat and completely smooth. Even the strongest suction cups will not adhere to porous surfaces for long because it is impossible to achieve a bond free of air pockets. That said, there are several types of surfaces that the suction cups will stick to, including glass, hard plastic, acrylic, formica and stainless steel. You can attach suction cups to windows, mirrors, in front of your dishwasher, or on the side of a metal file cabinet without too many problems. Avoid using suction cups on curved or textured surfaces, such as the car dashboard, as it will be very difficult to achieve a lasting bond. If you need to hang something in your car, it is best to explore other sticker options. 2. Clean the surface Before attempting to apply a suction cup, it is important to make sure that the surface to which you are applying is clean. Rub your chosen surface with your preferred household cleaner, then rinse and dry it thoroughly with a lint-free cloth. The purpose of cleaning the surface is to remove any dirt or debris that may hinder proper fit. If you are dealing with shower walls and could use a good method to get rid of soap slag or mineral deposits, check out this cleaning hack. 3. Clean it again! Once the surface is clean, you will want to clean it again, but this time using rubbing alcohol. Why clean it twice, you ask? The main reason is that rubbing alcohol is not good Remove superficial dirt, but it is perfect for cleaning any last traces of dirt before sticking to your suction cup! In addition to Cups, rubbing alcohol is also the best way to prepare a surface before hanging command strips or hooks. Clean the surface first as usual, then clean it with rubbing alcohol before applying the adhesive. 4. Clean the suction cup itself In addition to cleaning the surface you want to attach, you will want to clean the suction cup itself. Rinse it under warm water, paying special attention to the inside of the cup, then remove the excess water. (Do not dry- however, water droplets inside the cup can help prevent air pockets from forming inside the seal.) In addition to cleaning the glass, warm water will also help soften the material, making it more flexible so that it is easier to press down and create a strong bond with the surface. (And in case you haven't picked up by now, cleaning is very important when it comes to putting suction cups! Nine out of ten times, it's dirt, grease or dirt that's to blame for keeping your suction cup from getting stuck.) 5. Press firmly Finally, it's time to apply the suction cup! :-) Firmly press the suction cup against the surface you want to place it on, making sure that there are no air bubbles between the cup and the surface. 6. Let it set After attaching the suction cup, leave it alone for 24 hours to give the title time to set. This means not putting any extra weight on the suction cup or the item to which it is attached, and do your best to avoid wetting the area. Leaving it alone for a whole day will help ensure that the small amount of water inside the suction cup has dried and that the cup and surface are fully connected. 7. Check in Once your suction cup is stuck, be sure to check the bond from time to time. Press the suction cup from time to time to remove any pockets of air that may have formed. Keep in mind that changes in temperature and humidity (which are common in the bathroom and kitchen) can affect the malleability of the cup, which can also cause air pockets to develop or the suction cup to move away from the surface. Follow these steps before giving up a finicky suction cup — they've done wonders for me, and I'm sure they'll be so useful to you! How do you use suction cups around the house? Suction cups are some of the best organizing tools for any kitchen or bathroom, and learning how to get a suction cup to stick should obviously be one of your top priorities if you have a habit of using them often The only problem with suction cups is that they better stick to smooth, waterproof surfaces such as tiles, smooth metals and fiberglass. Effectively, one of the best ways to get the suction cup to stick (because of the science behind all this, is to ensure that the surface is completely free of any traces of dirt before attach the suction cup to any surface. To ensure that the suction cup has a perfectly strong bond with almost any follow these elaborate steps: Step 1. First, you must ensure that your surface will be friendly with the suction cup. As mentioned earlier, this can only be achieved if the surface is mainly free of any kind of dirt, grease or oil. Therefore, thoroughly scrub the surface as you attach your suction cup with dishwashing soap and dry it. Step 2 Then clean the surface once more with alcohol or vinegar. This is mainly because rubbing alcohol is especially good at getting rid of grease and other materials relatively more difficult to get rid of. Once made dry the surface with a piece of cloth. Step 3 This is perhaps the most important part of how to get a suction cup to stick. Take your individual suction cups and rinse each under a warm stream of water. This should help get rid of excess dirt. Then wipe the water with a piece of cloth. Step 4 Once you have dried, the suction cup is ready for use. Often, one of the reasons why the suction cups do not stick in the first place is because they are not installed firmly enough on the wall. Push the suction cup as hard as you can, and in the process, make sure it doesn't slide or show signs of air bubbles trapped inside it. However, depending on how you plan to use it, you may have to attach the suction cup to the wall, hook or shelf you are using before finally mounting it into place. Step 5 Finally, let the suction cup rest for about 12-24 hours before adding the weight on top of it. If you were interested enough, you may have noticed that when knowing how to get a suction cup to paste, it is the small mistakes between them that really affect how well or how badly the suction cup will behave during use. A stainless steel sink never goes out of style. Stainless steel, as its name suggests, does not collect stains like other sink materials and blends timelessly with any decorating trend. The best thing about a stainless steel sink, however, is its durability. You can't splinter it, break it or destroy it without actually trying. A disadvantage to a stainless steel sink, it can come as a surprise when you try to fix a basket to hold sponges or utensils inside - it is difficult to connect suction cups to its surface. Get over the problem with something you'll probably have in your medicine cabinet. close *Monday to Saturday from 8:00 - 20:00 Central Time and Sunday 9:00 - 7:00 PM Central Time. Thank you for your interest! You don't hate like sometimes some cups just don't stick the way you'd like? Well, here are the tricks MomsBudget uses to make sure these suction cups stick, and they're fine! Note that glass is the best surface for pasting suction cups, although some walls or other flat surfaces (i.e. a flat stainless steel refrigerator) may also successfully contain suction cups. First, make sure that the surface you are placing the suction cup is completely clean. If there is dirt or grain, the suction will not be able to suck to hold. Then clean the surface first. And yes, even grease and fingerprints can mean a less than stellar surface to hold on to, so you can wipe down any oils that may be on the surface using rubbing alcohol. So when you're sticking the suction cup, place the inside of the suction cup slightly damp before it succeeds it in the wall or glass, as this will help you keep your suck.
