A good study location is important to achieve an optimal level of information retention. For many, this could mean studying on campus to escape the distractions that come from the comforts of home. Here is a wide range of To achieve his study at UBC for both returning students and newcomers: Libraries Irving K. Barber Learning Centre Located in the center of the UBC campus and just three minutes walk from the bus circuit, Irving K. Barber Learning Centre has been the throbbing heart of academic and social life at the university since its opening in 2008, which incorporates the 1925 historical library. The vast 250,000-square-foot, four-storey building is divided into four areas and uses: the library, the public study room, classrooms and the Chapman Learning Commons. Image: Daily Hive The library occupies the north wing of the building, with the best study areas of the library located on the west side of the building, where there are window-side tables and study carts that overlook Koerner Plaza and the clock tower. However, the library's most famous space is the Ridington Room, famous as the Harry Potter Room for its winding staircase and plastered portrait walls. Image: The areas of the public study room of the daily hive and classroom space occupy most other areas of the Learning Center. The main atrium and grand staircase are equipped with numerous desks and chairs for students to use as a place of study, but the area can become a noisy food cut during the day and in the early hours of the night due to group talks. Chapman Learning Commons, a historic space on the third floor resembling The Great Hall at Hogwarts in Harry Potter, offers a relatively quiet studio setting. There are a number of fast computers, both iMac and PC computers, for students and teachers to use. Image: Daily hive But if you need an environment of zero noise and distraction to reach an optimal level of study, the Nass reading room on the fourth floor and the Musqueam reading room are designated quiet spaces to study. If you need a bite or a dose of caffeine, Ike's Cafe on the main floor is always a popular takeaway restaurant for students studying inside the building. The Learning Center is just across the street from the new Student Union building. It has one of the longest operating hours on campus: 6 a.m. to 1 a.m. throughout the school year and 24/7 hours of operation during final exam seasons. Address:

1961 East Mall, Vancouver Phone: 604-822-6375 Website: Law Library at Allard Hall Allard Hall, the center of UBC Law School, is located just north of the Irving K. Barber Learning Center. Built in 2011, the building is one of UBC’s newest and most modern with some of the best studio spaces around. The in the main areas are massive and there are study carts for those who need an environment for greater concentration. Electric outlets are available for almost all seats, which are reclining chairs that are almost overly comfortable. Picture: Daily Hive Image: Daily Hive As the library was built in 1997, before laptop age, power outlets can be difficult to find on some tables and some outlets simply don’t work. In addition, computers on most floors are outdated and Wi-Fi on underground levels can be patchy. However, the top-notch area near the entrance and service desk was recently renovated with more study areas, informal seating and fast computers for students to use. Address: 1958 Main Mall, Vancouver Phone: 604-822-2406 Website: Fun Fact: This book-shaped building was designed by the late Arthur Erickson. Library of Education in the Neville Scarfe Building Located inside the Neville Scarfe building, the UBC Educational Library is quiet and rarely occupied despite being one of the best places to study on campus. It has large windows and a variety of study area configurations, including long tables, study wagons and round tables for group work. Image: Daily hive During the summer, the lobby area of the library underwent a renovation with a new circulation desk, improvements to the Wi-Fi system and additional power outlets and furniture to increase seating capacity. Address: 2125 Main Mall, Vancouver Phone: 604-822-5381 Website: Woodward Library Woodward Library is the largest science library on the UBC campus and has the largest biomedical collection in western Canada. The study areas are relatively quiet on the upper floors, including private rooms that do not require reservation. But keep in mind that most of the library are somewhat outdated considering they were built more than 50 years ago. Electrical outlets are difficult to find and air ventilation can be obsolete. Picture: Daily Hive Only the 'Garden Level' – the lower level of the building – features modern facilities after being renovated in 2010. Address: 2198 Health Sciences Mall, Vancouver Phone: 604-822-2883 604-822-2883 Asian Library The Asian Library is located under a building with a pyramid-shaped roof with a Japanese-style pagoda and skylight on its pinnacle. Located just behind the C.K. Choi building, the library is accessed via a gravel road through a pocket forest. Image: The hive's daily study space within this library is somewhat limited relative to other campus libraries, but it is also one of the quietest areas as it receives little pedestrian traffic. Address: 1871 West Mall, Vancouver Phone: 604-822-2427 Website: David Lam's Management Research Library of David Lam's Management Research Library The Business Library Inside the Northern End of the Second and Third Floors of the Henry Angus Building recently underwent an extensive renovation funded by Canaccord Financial Inc. Image: Daily Hive Keep in mind that the library is small and often full of Sauder School of Business students during high school seasons of the school year. Address: 2053 Main Mall, Vancouver Phone: 604-822-9400 Website: X-wi7x-wa UBC's own library for First Nations studios is largely hidden from view for those who are walking through the West Mall. It is located directly opposite the Geography building, inside the First Nations Longhouse, and features a small waterfall. While it is one of the newest areas of UBC, keep in mind that it is also a very small library with limited operating hours that do not extend until night. Address: 1985 West Mall, Vancouver Phone: 604-822-8738 Website: Student spaces Student Nest: the Student Union Building UBC's 250,000-foot Student Union Building, also known as the UBC Student Nest, offers students a unique destination for all their needs, including large study spaces that are within walking distance of a wide selection of food and services. Image: Daily Hive Image: Daily Hive There are study areas around the main atrium, including food court spaces and desks that line the glass facade and face the new West Mall square and grassy hill. Another large multi-storey study space with comfortable red single-seat armchairs is located on the opposite side of the building and is relatively quiet. The building's operating hours are from 7 a.m. to midnight throughout the school year. Address: 6133 University Boulevard, Vancouver Website: Forest Science Center The Forest Science Center is located at the southern end of the academic core of the UBC campus. an impressive place to study given the extensive use of the interior of the wooden building to show the capabilities of wood construction. The main atrium of the building, where the study areas are located, lies under a large skylight supported by a tree canopy and tree columns. In addition, the walls of the atrium are lined with maple wood panels. There are also elevated study areas within the atrium and even a so-called tree house. Address: 2424 Main Mall, Vancouver Website: Note: This building is closed and requires an access card to enter after the 6 pm Life Sciences Institute There are two massive open atriums within the Institute of Life Sciences building, which is located near the Forest Science Center. Both atriums are under a large skylight, with an atrium placed with rows of long tables and the other atrium with informal circular seating areas. Address: 2350 Health Sciences Mall, Vancouver Website: Fun Data: There is a research morgue at the basement level of this building. Note: This building is closed and requires an access card to enter after 6 pm Student Rooms Student lounge spaces dedicated to certain departments and faculties are scattered throughout the campus. Image: Daily Hive An empty classroom A space rarely used to study are the hundreds of classrooms and theaters scattered throughout campus buildings, when these spaces are empty and unused. These spaces are perfect for group work and night studio. However, be prepared to evict the space if there is an incoming class or a reserved event in the room. The best empty classrooms are located in the Buchanan D building, SWING Space and the Henry Angus building. Picture: Daily Hive Other great places The Boulevard Coffee Roasting Co. This café across from University Boulevard and a short walk from buses has long been a favorite meeting place and short-term study area for students. There is a wide selection of coffees and teas, as well as a varied healthy menu that includes a variety of cakes, sandwiches, salads and snacks. Picture: Daily Hive Address: 5970 University Boulevard, Vancouver Phone: 604-827-4488 Website: Free Wi-Fi: Yes Bean Around The World You may not know that this place exists if you do not live on campus. Located at the southern end of the UBC campus, just outside the academic core, it is a major outpost of Bean Around The World. It is a loose space, with large interior seating and an outdoor patio in fine weather. In addition to the cafeteria's typical drinks, the menu includes a variety of sandwiches, wraps, soups and even pizzas.
