How to make a toga out of a sheet youtube

1. Take the corner of the flat sheet in one hand. Put about 6 to 8 (15 to 20 cm) of sheet in one hand to tie the knot with it. Hold the flat sheet above both shoulders with the corresponding hand (left hand to left shoulder, right hand to right shoulder, etc.). 2 Drape sheet snug across your chest. Then tuck it under the opposite arm. [2] 3 Shorten Toga if necessary. If Tuga is too long, up to an edge over about six inches (15 cm), and try again. Keep the setting until the right length, which is around the knee area. 4 Wrap Toga around your back. The sheet under your arm will hold it, and then once again gather around the front of your chest, under the opposite arm, and across your back. 5 tie toga. Raise the second corner of the sheet from the back to the corner in its hand. Secure two ends with dragonflies, dragonflies, or simple nodes. 6. Secure the layers tightly. Use several safety pins inside Toga if necessary. [3] 7 heads to the party to show that Tuga is ok! 1. Keep the corner of the thigh level of the sheet on your left. It should cover the front of your body and not wrap the fabric around your back in the shape of a skirt. Wrap to overlap the first corner a few inches. 3. Pin it in place. It should fit safely and form a waist band. 4 Throw the remaining sheet over your right shoulder. 1. Decide the length of your toga. It is recommended to use a twin sheet, though a full sheet can work (especially if you are taller). Turn the sheet to length until the desired length is the final outfit. For a short toga, cut the sheet in half. For the longer Tuga, up only 6 top to 1'. 2. Half the sheet again in half. This should be done in such a way that one half-back covers your body and covers the other half of the front. The folded section down should be above and outside the rest of the material. 3 pins of shoulders. Use a pin for each shoulder or number of pins. Pin the front part of the sheet to the back part of the sheet where your tresses meet your shoulder. [4] You can buy fancy PINs for the occasion or you can use 2 or similar round buttons (such as political buttons). 4 Place your arm through the hole. A hole had to be formed by spinning on the side that meets the front of the back sheet. Get your hands through this hole. 5. Tie the waist. Use strings, ribbons, or tight fitting belts to tie the waist. You will probably need to overlap the open sides a little before you secure the waist, to ensure that your skin is not exposed. 6. Enjoy your Toga! Have fun telling people that this is a historically detailed Greek outfit... if youre in this kind of thing. Add a new question how do Toga look royal? Wear a temptation of olive branches on your head and place a gold bruges on the shoulder strap. Add and wear a purple accent Sandalwood. The question can I use these techniques to make tuga for a child? Yes, but you may want to half the sheet in two, or use a smaller sheet. My question should resemble Athena: How can I make this dress look more like a Greek god? Wear a temptation of olive branches around your head (Athena invented them). Maybe add a helmet or a plate of breasts for armor, adding shields and a cane will also help. What about the question if I'm fat? Use a larger sheet. The question can I wear something underneath if it's cold or does it seem weird? You can wear something underneath if you want to test the effect, you can clip it temporarily together and try it out with different clothes underneath. Question, can I wear it, even if I'm a boy? Togas is the outfit of choice for an ancient Roman man. So yes it would be perfectly appropriate for men to follow these same guidelines. Question if I'm 4'11, what size sheet should I use? A little sheet, preferably a twin. Remember you can always use a larger sheet and just make it up to two half. Question how much bed do you need? You can use any size sheet you use, but in general, a twin works best. The question I didn't understand how to do the last one, can you explain? When it says it's folded into two halves with one half around your front and the other around your back, you fold it left to right, not top down. Question if I have a king-sized sheet, how much can I rise up to be a toga? depends on how tall you are. Select a color. Typically, adult Roman males wore out-of-white colors for their togas. The color of that fabric was not painted. However, other colors were worn, though they typically specify something special about the person wearing them. For example, if Toga was really white because the fabric had been bleached, that generally indicated that the person was in public office. Dark colors indicated that the person was in mourning. White was covered with purple borders by Magistrate Koroll, while purple was covered with gold thread around the border, at times, by generals (although only those who had won battles and battles), kings and emperors. 2. Choose a type of fabric. The Romans wore wool, mainly because it remains better than other fabrics in place. Wool can be itchy, as well as very hot. In addition, wool is an expensive fabric. If you want something cheaper, the cotton mixture should be good. [1] Muslin is a good option, because it is light and flowing. The other option is any flannel that is going on. You can find both of these fabrics in your local fabric store. Basically, you don't want anything too smooth because it slips right off. 3. Get the right length. The real Tuga requires about 4 to 5 meters (4 to 5 meters) of fabric, depending on your height and build. If you're a little older, you may want to spring for 6 yards (5.5 meters), just in case. [2] In the fabric shop, you can specify how much fabric you want. Sometimes, if you finish the screw, the store will give you a discount on buying the rest of the bolt passed what you are ordered to cut. For example, if you ask for 4 yards and bolt up to 4 3/4 yards, the store may discount you if you want that extra 3/4 from a yard. 4. Go for a sheet. Another simpler option is to use a simple flat sheet. While you don't get as long as a traditional toga, it can be a simple way to create a toga. [3] The Queen is a good size. It's a little longer than full, but it doesn't have as much width as a king. Some prefer a twin or feather because it doesn't add to the bulk size. 5. Wash the fabric. It can help to wash and dry the fabric. Washing it makes it softer, which can help it flow better. Try adding fabric softener to help with the process. You can run it through the washing machine twice if once it doesn't soften up enough to drape well. 1. Decide if and how you want to sew your fabric. You can use the fabric as it is. However, you can also sew it up to a toga that is more in line with the traditional shape. Another option is simply the same edge. While it doesn't matter with some fabrics, hemming your toga edge will keep you from fraying. If you don't care about fraying, you can give up the hemming process. 2 toga slices. Toga's shape changed over the years. You can cut your toga to be more like a traditional toga, if you want. However, you can simply leave it as a rectangle, as well, how you get it from the store. One shape was a straight line across the top and curved across the bottom, creating pointed ends. The next figure was more of a hexagonal, with a straight line across the top, with two lines slanting down to points. Down was a straight line with two lines slanting up the same points, though this was a bit curved. It is a flattering form of a regular hexagon. [4] If you want any of these shapes, cut the fabric with fabric scissors, leaving about 2 1/4 inches (5.7 cm) around the side to each other fabric. 3 edges. Whether you're hemming the edges of the rectangle or from the toga you cut, you can use a simple double-doublemmer. [5] If you have any curved edges, you may need to get Extra stage of sewing along it before folding. [6] Iron Edge. To bring together the raw edges, make the fabric about 3.4 inches (1.9 cm). [7] If you're hemming the curved edge, you can make this section easier by stitching along the first edge, about 3/4 inches in, then line it up along that line up. [8] Iron Edge. Until it's back in, this time about 1 1/2 inches in. re-iron it. [9] Sewing along the inside edge. To put it down, sew it, closer to the inside edge than the outside edge. [10] You can also sew small weights together to help it hang better. [11] 4 Use fabric glue. If you prefer not to sew, you can use fabric glue. Iron is the first time, folding it more than twice like you'd like if you sewed. Then either use liquid glue or iron tape to glue it. [12] If you use tape, you should probably iron the outside of the cloth to stick it. Make sure the glue is not too thick, or can show through the other side. Test it first to see how it looks. 1 start with your left arm. Take off a corner or edge and pull it from behind on your left arm. It's got to be cut too far, it's going to cross your knee. [13] If you use hexagonal shape, you need to get it up in the first half. The Romans usually wore at least one tonic under their togas. You can wear a shirt and shorts/pants or skirt to help cover up. [15] 2 Drape the other part around your back. Pull the rest of the cloth around your back. The part that drapes around the top of your shoulder/arm should also be on top when it comes around your back. In other words, you don't want it to twist. It's around so that it comes around your right side, under your arm. You may need some help at this stage, since the fabric is very long. 3 Wrap it across the front of your body. Drag the fabric around the front of your body, leaving enough to drape down your right. Put the rest of the cloth on your shoulder. Make sure the fabric drapes around your pelvis, you dont want it to get too tight. Also, this step makes your toga length, so make sure it's long enough. The next step will cover your trunk somewhat. 4 Wrap it around again. Come to your right the second time, again under your right arm. Let him down your right, a little higher than the first time. Put the end on your shoulder again [16] The point should be a little higher on the back than it is in front. 5 Set Toga. Look into the mirror and adjust the grapes you may need to drag it in places so it covers more. Length or short ends as needed. You can also pin it to help stay in place. [17] It's a good place to pin it on the left shoulder. Although Romans usually don't pin their togas, twisting it will give you more freedom to move, as Toga was relatively restrictive. You can also use a belt to help keep it in place. 6. Accessories your Toga. You can You can't do that. Swords and shields that can be purchased in a dollar shop, game store, or costume shop. You may also look for fake gold chains, jewelry, or amulets to accessorize your toga. Wear sandals to complete the look. Another option is to create a fake Laurel temptation. Open a wire coat hanger and turn it into a temptation around your head, get plastic leaves from the art supply store or collect real leaves and glue them or wrap around the wire. Make sure you let the glue dry. Be liberal when applying leaves to cover the wire. 1. Roll the sheet. The extent to which you get it depends on your preference. Nevertheless, it should be up in almost half length. [18] If you use a twin or a full sheet, you don't need to thing up to Toga. [19] If you cut it in exactly two, you cut a very short tuga. [20] For the longer Tuga, go all the way down when folding it. Just separate him [21], Togas was generally worn over the tonic so you can wear it on a shirt or some other type of clothing or even your regular clothes. Using a sheet, specifically, creates a fairly skimpy toga so you'll probably want to wear something underneath it. 2 Drape one end over the left arm. You can blow the whole edge on the left arm. [22] Another option is to just dump the top corner over so it makes up a point. [23] If you're dumping toga yourself, the easiest way to do this step is to throw all the sheets on your shoulders like a cape, in length. On your left, pull it up just the end dangling on your arm, then pulling up laxity on the other side. [24] 3 Pull it under your right arm. Now that you've got it from the left, pull it under your right arm. [25] You can leave it on your right arm, as Romans sometimes wear togas almost like a sling, but you move more if you pull it under. [26] Try to gently pleat the part that goes under your arm. That is, when it comes around your thigh from behind, use your hand to up the fabric back and forth, so it drapes in small chinas. [27] 4 throw the rest over your shoulder. Finally, make the end and squeeze it on your left shoulder. Try to get as much of it over your shoulder, while still pulling right down over your pelvis somewhat. [28] Although the Romans usually didn't pin their togas, you can use a safety pin to pin it in the shoulder. That way, it doesn't slip. [29] Add new question Does this really work? Yes, it works as long as the size sheet is correct. For an adult, the queen's size sheet should work fine until you are under 6 feet tall. If you're taller, use a king-sized sheet. What if you don't have a sheet? You might try looking at a drift shop for an old sheet, or from your friends/parents/ Ask big and grandmother if they are extra. Question can I dress as Poseidon while wearing a green sea toga? yes. That's a nice dress. I was looking for a quick Toga for once rebuilding the Bible, and this information was exactly what I needed! Thank you! ... Most of me have no plans for a Tuga party, I just enjoyed reading all the fun. I'm so glad to know what fabric length to gain and how to get into my Tugal The others helped, but I just need the third and fourth divisions. Great reading and good information.
