He is a former football coach who became a popular, commentator and Emmy Award-winning football analyst. He has a number of confirmation deals and has appeared in commercials, TV shows and movies. He is also the coaching voice for the NFL's Hit Madden video game. Madden had a great career as a coach. He was one of the NFL's youngest coaches and still has several records. He won the Super Bowl with the Oakland Raiders. Madden was inducted into the Football Hall of Fame for his coaching career in 2006. After a successful coaching career, The Lovely Log turned to broadcasting. He was a popular analyst and color commentator on every major sports network in the air for years. Madden made the most of his career and public persona as a big, friendly luggage that was all football. It was an image that made him a popular pitchman for many products. Madden has done commercials for a range of companies including: Tinktin. miller litt . ace hardware . Rent-A-Center. McDonald's electronic art outside the steakhouse. Verizon Wireless. John Madden was born early in Madden's life in Minnesota, but his family moved to California when he was young. Madden started playing football and quickly became a star football and baseball player in high school. He enrolled at San Matteo College and later at California Polytechnic. He continued to play both sports. In 1958, it was produced by the Philadelphia Eagles. He suffered a serious knee injury during training camp that ended his game. As he recovered, Madden watched football games and analyzed them with the coach. He realized that he was enjoying it. The switch to Madden's coaching career began to look at coaching. He was hired as an assistant coach at Alan Hancock College and became head coach there in 1962. In 1963, he was hired as an assistant defensive coach at San Diego State University. His impressive work at that school attracted the attention of the Oakland Raiders, who offered him a job as a line coach in 1967. The Oakland Raiders named Madden as raiders head coach two years later. He was the youngest NFL coach ever appointed to that position. He coached the Raiders for 10 years and led them through several successful seasons. Under his leadership, the Raiders won two AFC Championships, won 103 games and lost only 12. He took them all the way to the Super Bowl, which they won in 1977. He is still the most successful coach in Raiders history. Madden's professional broadcast retired from coaching in 1978, starting his new career as an announcer. He started at CBS and in 1981, he was paired with Pat Somerhal. The dynamic duet became a pair of high-level tv sports analysts. They continue to work together until 1994. In 1994, Madden's contract was switched to Fox Broadcasting. He stayed at Fox until 2002, when ABC offered him plum spot on Monday Night Football. He turned to NBC in 2005 for Sunday Night Football coverage. Ratings and awards during his tv career, Madden was the only announcer to work as a football commentator for all four major announcers. He was very popular and secured big ratings for every show he appeared in. He also won 16 Emmys for outstanding sports event analyst. Madden's colorful commentary was known for his long and extravagant interpretation. Jumping up and down, screaming overwhelmingly and interpreting it with the wonders of a word like Ham! Bang! and Donk! interfered. He was also known for his apparent painful remarks about the game, which probably came from his coaching days. Madden popularized the use of telestore, a device that allowed him to appear to mark the pitch with his own coaching notes. The device is now a regular part of almost every football player. He also made a big deal out of every Thanksgiving day game. Madden puts on a reality show for the fans, he was holding a ceremony that donated a turkey to the winning team. He also made his own titles for players he thought performed particularly well. Even after Madden left the broadcast, those traditions have continued. In 2009, Madden announced that he was retiring from broadcasting. Fear of Flying Madden refuses to fly on a plane and always travels by bus or train. This refusal led to once he broke his 476-weekend streak of appearances as a commentator. It occurred during a week that required him to cover a game in Tampa, Florida. Madden recently returned home from Jacksonville, Florida, to California and has decided he can't make the trip. He was replaced that week by former Cincinnati Bengals player Chris Collingsworth. When Madden retired a year later, Collingsworth took over his slot on Sunday Night Football. His TELEVISION, film and video appearances played himself in the 1994 film Little Giants and The Alternatives in 20. He hosted an episode of Saturday Night Live. He was in an episode of The Simpsons. He appears in Paul Simon's video for me and Julio Downs next to the schooler. He is stuck in the U2 video for a moment. Madden NFL has been one of the best-selling video games in history since 1988. Relationships she has been married to Virginia Fields since 1959. The couple have two sons, both of whom have played college football. He and his wife live in Plesenton, California. Favorite quotes from John Madden you're a man going boom, a guy Jab and one person will not be in the end zone. The best way to get more yards is to advance the ball down the field from the offense line. If you win the Super Bowl before firing, you're a genius, and everyone will listen to you. But a mentor is just a man with the best class in grammar school, and his best class was in P.E. High School. I never thought I'd be anything but the best class in the P.A.A., John Madden's success points are the only yardstwhile in our society to be a champion. Knowing a coach loves him is more important to a player than anything else. Self-praise for losers. win . Stand up for something. Always have class, and be humble. He won a Super Bowl as head coach of the Oakland Raiders and after retiring from coaching became a color commentator known for NFL telesetting. He was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 2006 in recognition of his coaching career. He is also widely known for the nfl's long-running Madden video game series, which has been approved and fronted since 1988. Madden worked as a color analyst for all four major CBS networks (1979–1993), Fox (1994–2001), ABC (2002–2005), and NBC (2006–2008). Madden retired from the broadcast after the 2008 NFL season to spend more time with his family. [1] He has also written several books and served as a commercial pitchman for various products and retailers. Early in life John Madden was born in Austin, Minnesota from Earl Russell Madden and Mary Margaret (née Flaherty) Madden. His father, a car mechanic, moved the Madden family to Dolly City, California, a town just south of San Francisco, as a young man. [2] He is parochial at Catholic School with John Robinson [3] in Our Lady Of Help,[4] graduating in 1950,[5] and then Jefferson High School, graduating in 1954. [6] [7] [8] A football star's professional game in high school. Madden initially played one season at San Matteo College. in 1954.[11] before he was given a football scholarship to the University of Oregon. [11][12][13] studying law, and playing football with boyfriend John Robinson. [14] He turned red because of a knee injury and had a knee operation. Then, in 1955, he attended San Matteo College[15], then Grace Harbor College, which played in the fall of 1956, before moving to Cal Poly in San Luis Obispo, where he played both offense and defense. For the Mustangs in 1957 and 1958[18][19] while earning a degree in education in 1959 and MA in education in 1961. [20] [21] He won all conference honors[22] in offensive tackles, and was a catcher on the Cal Poly baseball team. [11] Madden was drafted by the Philadelphia Eagles in the NFL in the 1958 round 21 (244th overall), but suffered another knee injury in his first training camp, ending his playing career before he had a chance to play professionally. [18] [12] Madden College coaching professional coaching recounted how he was involved with coaching: I hurt my rookie year with the Philadelphia Eagles - a knee injury - and I couldn't play. While I was resurpressing, Norm Van Brooklyn watched the film and explained what was going on. I ended up with a teaching degree, and my love of football has been meme with teaching. In 1960, he became assistant coach of Alan Hancock College in Santa Maria and was promoted to head coach in 1962. Following the 1963 season, he was hired as an assistant defensive coach at San Diego State, where he served until 1966. During that final campaign, the 1966 Aztecs ranked among the country's top small colleges. While at San Diego State, Madden coached under Don Curiel, whom Madden credits as an influence on his coaching and feels he will one day be included in the Hall of Fame. That season, he helped the team reach Super Bowl 2. A year later, after Raiders head coach John Rawch resigned to take the same position with the Buffalo Bills, Madden will take over as Raiders head coach 4, 1969, becoming, at the age of 32, the youngest professional football head coach until then. John Madden was arguably the best Oakland Raiders coach in the team's history, according to former Raiders coach Dennis Allen. Madden's Raiders reached five AFC Championship Games in seven years, losing the Raiders with the same image the Dallas Cowboys had before -- as a team that was unable to win the big game. The Kansas City Chiefs lost 17-7 to the Kansas City Chiefs, despite a 12-1–1 mark in 1969. Three years later, what appeared to be a last-minute victory against the Steelers instead became part of the football loarers that Franco Harris' impeccable reception gave Pittsburgh a 13-7 win. Then, in 1974, after twice defeating the defending Super Bowl champion Miami Dolphins in dramatic fashion, the Raiders lost again to the Steelers in the AFC Championship Game. In 1975, the Raiders went 11-3, losing 16-10 to the Pittsburgh Steelers in the AFC Championship Game. In 1976, the Raiders went 13-1 in the regular season and escaped the first round of playoff games with a dramatic and controversial victory against the New England Patriots. In the second round of the playoffs, they beat the Steelers for the ASIAN Championship. On January 9, 1977, the Madden Raiders finally seized their first Super Bowl with a convincing 32–14 win over the Minnesota Vikings. The Raiders lost the 1977 AFC Championship Game to the Denver Broncos. After the Raiders failed to qualify for the CUP in 1978, Madden announced his retirement on January 4, 1979, due to a growing deterioration in wound conditions and burnout. [25] Among Madden's successes as head coach was winning a Super Bowl, becoming the youngest coach to reach 100 career regular-season victories, a record he collected in just ten full coaching seasons at the age of 42. Madden is still the coach with the most wins in Raiders history. Madden never had a losing season as head coach. His overall winning percentage, including playoff games, ranks second in league history. Madden achieved his record in a period that included coaches Sir Tom Landry, Don Schulla, Chuck Noll and Bud Grant, who are generally regarded as the top coaches of that era. After working in lower profile matches for CBS during his years, CBS Sports went on to become the network's top football doubles player in 1981, replacing Tom Brookshayer. Madden had previously teamed up with Summerall at CBS with various announcers such as Dick Stockton, Frank Glyber and Gary Bender. Tim Madden and Summerall went into contact with eight Super Bowls together (five for CBS and three for Fox). On occasions where Summerall was unavailable (during the CBS years, Summerall was typically scheduled to comment on the U.S. Open during the early weeks of the NFL season), Madden teamed up with Écola Wayne Scully, followed by Vern Levandqvist. Madden told Somerall in his FINAL CBS telecaste together (the NBC Championship Game on January 23, 1994), that while CBS may no longer have the NFL (for now, as CBS will eventually reclaim NFL rights in 1998 with NBC's ban on AFC telecasts rights), they have minimal memories. In ABC's 2005 Monday Night Football Telecaste final, Madden used a similar choice of words. When Fox Sports won the rights to NFL games in 1994, CBS employees became free agents. Madden was the biggest star in the football broadcast, and Fox, ABC and NBC offers higher than a maximum of $2 million a year for sportscaster rights; NBC owner General Electric suggested making Madden his global spokesperson; and General Electric Rail was building a luxury train for him. [29] After almost joined ABC, Madden and Summerall joined fox's NFL coverage,[29] which gave the network the credibility to broadcast what Rupert Murdoch called the crown jewel of all sports programming in the world. Madden's contract paid him more annually than any NFL player. [28] However, Fox was reportedly losing about $4.4 billion in his NFL contract for an eight-year deal he signed in 1998, thereby trying to reduce programming costs. Fox Madden's contract for 2003 was worth $8 million. [30] His last job at Fox for super bowl XXXVI was in February 2002. In 2002, Madden became an ABC Monday night football commentator and worked with longtime game announcer Al Michaels. Madden reportedly earned $5 million a year. [30] NBC Sports In 2005, NBC Sports Chairman Ebersole announced that Madden will perform a color commentary for NBC NFL's Sunday night games, which begin with the 2006 season, bringing him to the first athlete who has worked for all of America's Big Four broadcast television networks. Madden also reached the milestone of calling the Super Bowl on all the big four broadcast networks when he appeared on the XLIII Super Bowl broadcast in 2009. On October 13, 2008, NBC announced that Madden would not travel to the Seattle Seahange-Tampa Bay Buccaneers' Sunday Night Football Game in Tampa, Florida, marking the end of Madden's 476th weekend line of consecutive broadcast appearances. Madden, who travels by bus, decided to take the week off because he had traveled from Jacksonville to San Diego and had to return to Florida before returning home to Northern California. Madden replaced Football Knight in the U.S. studio analyst Chris Collinsworth for the game[31] and returned for the following teleseet on November 2, 2008 in Indianapolis (until 2010 the NFL did not schedule Sunday night games for a week in October, to overlap with the World Series at about the same time). Madden recalled his final game on February 1, 2009 for super bowl XLIII between the Arizona Cardinals and the Pittsburgh Steelers. Madden announced his official retirement from the broadcast booth on April 16, 2009. [1] He was replaced by former Cincinnati Bengals wide receiver Chris Collinsworth. [29] Radio John Madden made his start in broadcasting a call to longtime San Francisco radio personality Emperor Jane Nelson showing at KYA station in the 1970s while coaching the Raiders. He followed Nelson when he moved to KSCO station, and the calls continued even after Madden's coaching retirement. After Nelson's sudden retirement in 1994, Madden began attending KNBR. [32] In 1997, he began calling radio station KCBS 5 days a week (at 8:15 .m Pacific time). This continued through Thanksgiving Day 2015, when he stopped contact after heart surgery and other health concerns. In 2017, he made a two-week appearance on KCBS radio, and on Mondays and Fridays at 9:15 a.m. .m. In August 2018, he made regular radio calls, citing a desire to remove any commitments from his show. KCBS named him the chief investigative correspondent at large, suggesting that he may sometimes get in touch again. [33] Over the years, Madden often took a fantasy character, discussing how he run the Boston Marathon the day before the event to avoid crowds or even discuss participating in Alaska Idliarod Dog Sleigh Trails Race. Madden has also aired sports comments on the syndicate on Westwood One radio station in the United States. Madden's film was shortly featured in Christine's film. It was Madden. Coaching an American football team during a televised broadcast. Madden was also featured in the film Little Giants. Buses full of NFL pros are lost and happen to come across guys looking for directions. Madden helps the team draw the ultimate game-winning game called Appending Puerto Rico, a version of a fumblosky. Madden also played himself as the announcer for fictional games in the film Switches alongside his then-broadcast partner Pat Somerall. A video clip interview from Madden about football coach Bob La Salle appears near the beginning of the 2014 film's closing credits when the feature game stands. Madden ads have appeared in a variety of radio and TELEVISION commercials including Ace Hardware, Outback Steakhouse (corporate sponsor of MaddenCruiser), [34] Verizon Wireless, Rent-a-Center, Miller Litt, Toyota, Sirius Satellite Radio and Strict Actin Tinactin. [35] [1] [28] Specifically, Miller's beer ads cemented Madden's image in the public eye as a character full of beer but lovely. Madden played a short feature role in the 1994 film Little Giants Youth Football and in Alternatives in 2015. He appeared in an episode of The Simpsons in 19. Sunday, Sunday Cruddy. Madden also hosted an episode of NBC's Saturday Night Live show in 1982 with musical guest Jennifer Holiday. Madden was also placed in the music video for the Irish band U2 for the song Stuck in a Moment You Can't Get Out of. In the video, Madden is commenting on a fake football game involving Paul Hewson as a hiter who misses a short shot to win the game. He makes a similar
